GUARD BEATEN AT MANSFIELD, LIKELY TO DIE

14 Prisoners Stage Unsuccessful Attempt To Gain Freedom.

OFFICIAL SHOOTS SELF

Accidental Discharge of Gun Hits Assistant Superintendent in Leg.

By The Associated Press

MANSFIELD, O., Oct. 2—Fourteen prisoners made an unsuccessful attempt to escape from the correction block of the Mansfield reformatory last night, and in the melee a guard was injured, probably fatally, and the assistant superintendent accidentally shot himself.

Frank B. Hanger, 42, guard in charge of the correction tier, was beaten over the head with an iron bar, and physicians expressed the belief he would die. His home formerly was at Mt. Vernon.

During the excitement in the cell block, Assistant Superintendent O. S. Garver accidentally shot himself in the leg. His condition is not serious.

Find Five Hiding

First reports from the institution were that five prisoners had escaped, but later authorities found them hiding in various parts of the correction block. All were placed in solitary confinement.

Authorities at the reformatory were reluctant to discuss the incident. One report was that a Negro prisoner, named Merrill Chandler, picked the lock on his cell and escaped into the corridor, where he released another prisoner. Together, they assaulted Hanger with an angle iron.

After rendering the guard unconscious, they took his keys and released the 13 other prisoners in the block. It was nearly half an hour later when another guard discovered the prisoners roaming about the tier.

Police and deputy sheriffs were rushed to the institution from Mansfield and soon corraled ten of the prisoners. The reports were broadcast that five had escaped.

Further search of the block, however, revealed them hiding in the hallway and under bunks.

Careful Plot Indicated

Officials expressed the belief that the plot was the outgrowth of a well-laid plan. One of the prisoners involved was said to be Charles Williams, 22. His mother, Mrs. Ella Florenz Thomson, former Cleveland and Cincinnati beauty shop operator, was arrested last Friday, charged with having smuggled saws to her son. She was bound over to the grand jury under $5,000 bond this morning. Two guns, a saw blade and magazines found in her possession when arrested here Friday by Mansfield detectives, were introduced as evidence.

Superintendent T. C. Jenkins declined to discuss the plot and would not make public the names of the prisoners involved.

Man Is Knocked Out as Souvenir Shell Explodes

The explosion of the cap of a souvenir 37 millimeter shell, stunned Albert Reynolds, 33, of 486 Thompson street, into unconsciousness yesterday afternoon. The shell was a souvenir from Camp Perry. Reynolds was at one time in the Ohio National Guard.

Reynolds was in his backyard, drilling a hole into the cartridge when the cap exploded. The cartridge was the type used in light artillery. Reynolds was holding it in one hand.

He lay at the City hospital in an unconscious condition for about five hours after the explosion. This afternoon he was removed to his home, conscious but still suffering from shock.

Pieces of the shell tore his hands and his eyes were swollen from dirt thrown into them. His physician said he did not believe the sight would be impaired. His condition is not regarded as serious. He was taken to the hospital in the Ace and Eccles invalid car.

Grid Players Injured.

AKRON, O., Oct. 3—Five Buchtel football players were injured, two seriously, when their automobile went into a ditch after the driver had been blinded by the lights of a truck. Chester Thompson, 20, suffered a fractured skull and internal injuries. He was believed to have received a similar injury.

TRIAL ENDS

JAMES J. DAVIS

TRIAL OF DAVIS ENDS ABRUPTLY

Mistrial Declared When One Juror Accuses Another.

MISCONDUCT IS CHARGED

Judge Later Exonerates Alleged Offender, Reprimands Accuser.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 3—The lottery trial of Senator James J. Davis was ended abruptly today, Judge Frank J. Coleman declaring a mistrial because one of the jurors was shown to have reported alleged misconduct or another juror to defense counsel during the week-end.

Charles J. Margiotti of defense counsel told the court that juror number seven, Henry J. Moore, reported to him that alternate number 13, Abe H. Weintraub, had been telling the other jurors during the trial that defense witnesses were lying.

Judge Coleman held a formal investigation, as a result of which he completely exonerated Weintraub and severely reprimanded Moore. Moore was paroled in his own custody until tomorrow morning.

Charles J. Margiotti, Charles H. Tuttle and Joseph E. Davies, counsel for the defense, gave out this statement:

"We are deeply disappointed that in the concluding hours of this case events so developed as to bring about a mistrial.

"In our judgment there is no doubt but what the evidence clearly established overwhelmingly the innocence of the accused, and that in a few days, the case would have resulted in a verdict of complete exoneration and acquittal."

Before the hearing was adjourned Judge Coleman struck the parole from the record because the juror had not been arrested or cited for contempt.

It was learned, however, that the case would be placed on the calendar for call next Monday.

Senator Davis planned to issue a statement after conference with his counsel.

Announcement of the mistrial was made as Judge Coleman opened court for what would have been the third week of the trial.

SURPRISE WITNESSES ON TRIAL PROGRAM

By The Associated Press

CLEVELAND, O., Oct. 3—The state's second major offensive in the embezzlement trial of Maurice Maschke, Republican leader, and five co-defendants, was opened today with a battery of surprise witnesses summoned to testify.

Prosecutor F. L. A. Leighley said he will attempt to prove the defendants put between $90,000 and $70,000 into the county treasury, in addition to the $177,000 which Maschke said he helped restore. "But we didn't take any out," Maschke said.

Gas Consumers Lose in Columbus Rate Battle

State Utilities Commission Ruling Favors Company.

CHARGE IS 55 CENTS

Bricker Dissents as Board Sets Price at Higher Figure.

By The Associated Press

COLUMBUS, O., Oct. 3—Columbus gas consumers today lost their fight to maintain the present 48 cents per thousand cubic foot rate, when the state utilities commission in a two to one opinion fixed the rate to be charged by the Columbus Gas & Fuel company at 55 cents per thousand cubic feet. The city of Columbus indicated it would appeal immediately to the Ohio supreme court.

Chairman E. J. Hopple and Commissioner Frank W. Geiger, in a majority opinion, held the 48 cents rate confiscatory and not compensatory to the company.

Commissioner John W. Bricker, in his minority opinion, held the 48 cent rate, fixed by the United States district court several years ago, was adequate and compensatory.

Compares Other Rates

In announcing the commission decision, Hopple made public a list of gas rates as charged in other cities. These rates were based on the consumption of an average of 7,500 cubic feet. These rates, he said, were Akron 59; Canton 59; Cincinnati 72 3-10; Cleveland 56 4-10; Columbus 48; Dayton 70; Hamilton 77; Toledo 55 3-10; Youngstown 56, and Zanesville 60.

The fight between the gas company and the consumers started shortly after Nov. 5, 1929, when voters of the city approved a city ordinance calling for a rate of 48 cents per thousand cubic feet with a minimum monthly charge of 75 cents. The commission in its ruling today affirmed the 75 cent minimum monthly charge.

The company immediately appealed from the decision of the voters to the utilities commission, under that section of the law which permits a utility to appeal from any rate ordinance adopted by the city.

Before the commission could consider the case, the city went into the common pleas court and obtained a temporary restraining order, preventing the company from charging a 10 per cent increase it had proposed.

Refuses Bricker Resignation

Recent developments in the case included the attempt of Commissioner Bricker to resign. Bricker, candidate for attorney general on the Republican ticket, submitted his resignation to Governor George White, a Democrat, but the governor refused to accept it.

Bricker was told by the chief executive to "clear his desk of important matters." Bricker retaliated by saying his desk was clear and that he had written an opinion in the Columbus gas case more than a month before. He charged that Hopple, the only Democrat on the

WIRING BLAMED AS TRUCK AND 2 CARS BURN

Quick Action of Ward Company Driver Saves Valuable Freight Cargo.

GASOLINE TANK EXPLODES

Occupants Escape Injury as Flames Destroy Passenger Automobiles.

Defective wiring is blamed for fires that destroyed two passenger automobiles and the tractor of a heavily loaded Ward Transportation Co. truck over the week-end. A light coach owned by John J. Speidel of near Edison and a large sedan owned by Sam Paulson of Bucyrus, formerly of Marion, and driven by Ralph Nicolosi, of 141 Waterloo street, were destroyed.

Presence of mind of Monroe Freed, driver of the Ward truck, saved a valuable load of tires and batteries when the tractor of the truck caught fire two and one-half miles west of here on the Kenton pike, yesterday at 2 a. m.

Uncouples Trailer

When fire broke out in the gasoline tank back of the driver's seat, Freed uncoupled the trailer and drove the tractor 30 feet down the road before he was forced to jump to escape serious burns.

A high tension wire was broken when a 24-gallon gasoline tank behind the seat exploded and was hurled into the air. A 24-gallon tank under the seat was filled but did not explode.

Transportation company officials were unable this morning to estimate the damage. The exploding gas tank threw blazing gasoline on the tarpaulin over the freight but the fire department from the central station extinguished the flames before any damage was done.

Electric service in the vicinity was crippled as the high tension wire was broken, but repairs were made within a short time by the Central Utilities Service Co. of Marion.

Miss Ruth Yenny of Herman street, employed in Bucyrus, was with Nicolosi when fire broke out under the hood of the Paulson car on the Owens road south of Marion yesterday at 2:15 a. m. The lights of the car went out and the car tipped over in a ditch. Nicolosi dragged Miss Yenny from the car before she was burned. The couple were enroute to the home of Miss Yenny's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Yenny of the Mautz and Owens road. The damage was partly covered by insurance, Nicolosi said this morning.

Paulson Car Burns

A Ford coach belonging to John Speidel of near Edison was destroyed by fire on South Grand avenue late Saturday night with a loss estimated at $200. Speidel, an employe of the Erie railroad, was taking S. B. Clark, also an Erie employe, to his home on Grand avenue when the car suddenly burst into flames.

Firemen from the central station was called but were unable to save the machine.

Harding Memorial Association Names Marion Man Temporary Treasurer.

ANNUAL MEETING HELD

Frank Huber Named Vice President, Succeeding the Late J. F. Prendergast.

Hoke Donithen was elected as temporary treasurer of the Harding Memorial association, to succeed Andrew Mellon who resigned when he became ambassador to England, at the annual meeting of the association and its trustees in Hotel Harding this afternoon.

The only other new officer is Frank A. Huber, who was elected third vice president. C. B. King and Dr. Carl W. Sawyer, second and third vice presidents last year, were advanced to first and second vice presidents, respectively, this affair filling the vacancy in the list of officers caused by the death of Jennie F. Prendergast.

Officers reelected are Calvin Coolidge, honorary president; Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, president; Hoke Donithen, secretary.

George H. Van Fleet was elected a trustee to succeed the late Mr. Prendergast in the trustees session following the association meeting.

The trustees, on motion of Charles D. Schaffner, created a finance committee of six, including the president, secretary and treasurer and three trustees to be appointed by the president, and ordered that all funds of the association, excepting current banking funds for operating expenses, should be invested in United States government securities.

Harry Daugherty of Columbus paid a tribute to the memory of the late James F. Prendergast, as a man whose "character and characteristics were a credit to the best citizenship obtainable" and made a motion that a letter of sympathy be extended to the family, and spread on the records.

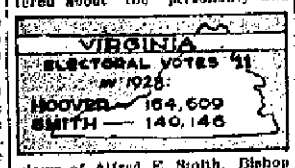
The Campaign Puzzle

Study Past State-by-State Votes in Making Your Forecast

(EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third of 16 articles showing how states voted in the 1928 presidential election and pointing out developments since. The fourth article will appear tomorrow.)

Virginia, which has 11 votes in the electoral college this year instead of its former 12, stepped out of the ranks of the "solid South" in 1928 to vote for a Republican candidate for president for the first time since reconstruction days.

The campaign in that year centered about the personality and views of Alfred E. Smith. Bishop James Cannon, who wielded considerable political power in the state, led an organized movement to win Democratic votes for the Republican nominee.



Echoes of the Democratic turmoil in that campaign were heard in the state elections the following year, when anti-Smith Democratic nominated Dr. William Moseley Brown for governor and left the post of lieutenant-governor open on their ticket. Republicans nominated a candidate for lieutenant-governor and endorsed Dr. Brown for the governorship.

This informal coalition was defeated by John Garland Pollard, dry regular Democrat and Smith supporter, by a vote of 169,229 to 99,650. Democratic leaders pointed to the result as evidence that Virginia remained fundamentally Democratic.

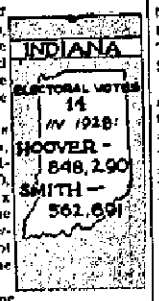
Prohibition and economic programs have been the most widely discussed issues in the current campaign.

Indiana, which has 14 electoral votes this year instead of its former 15, has voted for the Republican candidate for the presidency in every election since 1892, save in the three-cornered race of 1912 when it gave its vote to Woodrow Wilson.

The state administration, likewise, usually has been Republican. Republican governors have held office for the last 16 years, and until two years ago Republicans held all elective state offices.

In the state elections of 1930, Democrats elected a secretary of state, state treasurer, state auditor, superintendent of public instruction, two appellate court judges and the clerk of the state supreme court.

Of the state's 13 congressmen, Democrats elected nine in 1930, a gain of six seats for the party. The governorship was not involved in the 1930 elections.

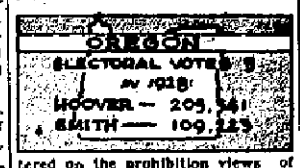


Programs for increasing employment and lowering taxes have been the major issues thus far in the current campaign.

Interest in the national campaign has overshadowed all local issues, but political students are watching closely developments in the campaign of the veteran Senator James E. Watson (R) for reelection. He is opposed by Frederick Van Nuys (D).

Oregon's electoral votes have been cast for the Republican candidate in every presidential election since 1888, except when the progressive split gave a plurality to Wilson in 1912. The state has five electoral votes this year, as in 1928.

In the 1928 campaign the interest of the state's voters was centered on the prohibition views of the two candidates and on the Tammany affiliations of Alfred E. Smith.



The senatorial election of 1930 saw Charles L. McNary (R) victorious over Elton Watkins (D) by a vote of 137,221 to 66,028, but in the gubernatorial election of the same year an independent, Julius L. Meier, received a majority over his Republican and Democratic opponents. Some of his adherents professed to view his election as a revolt against the state Republican organization.

In registrations for the primaries last May Democrats recorded a gain of 16,500 over their 1928 figures and the Republicans a gain of 10,000. In the Republican primary Rep. Willis C. Hawley was defeated for the nomination, and varying interpretations were placed on the result.

Prohibition, power and economic recovery are the issues attracting most attention in the current campaign.

You can smoke pack after pack of Chesterfields... and never grow tired of the taste. That's partly because Chesterfield uses just the right amount of Turkish tobacco to "season" the mild, sweet Domestic tobacco.

Too much Turkish makes a heavy-smoking cigarette... too little takes something away from taste and aroma. Just enough of the right kinds of Turkish tobacco—that's one reason why Chesterfields SATISFY!

REFRIGERATION MODES CHANGE

Electricity Rapidly Becoming More Popular as Means of Keeping Foods.

Electric refrigerators, uncommon a decade ago as a household appliance, are constantly being improved to give greater convenience and service to their thousands of users, conversation with Marion electric refrigerator dealers discloses

The last two years have brought about a number of improvements on the first practical refrigerator built for household use, and each improvement has made them more desirable as a part of the kitchen furnishings.

When the modern housewife steps to her electrical ice box and opens the door, a light automatically is turned on inside giving her a clear view of the contents This improvement appears on a majority of boxes now sold.

Moist Refrigeration

One of the latest kinks is a unit to give moist cold in electric refrigerators. While dry cold is an advantage in many instances, some refrigeration requirements demand moisture.

Among these are meat containers. Meats are kept in their natural color, both in the home and in the butcher's display cases where the moisture unit is used Florists also find moisture necessary to preserve flowers satisfactorily. Perhaps future developments may make it possible, for the housewife to have a moist cold compartment and a dry cold compartment in her refrigerator, broadening still further its wide range of uses.

Hot weather of the last few months have made popular another recent development. This is the fast freezing compartment. Water is frozen into ice cubes in 45 to 30 minutes in these compartments, making cold drinks readily available.

Electric refrigeration has proven itself a convenience in many ways. The family can be away for a day or a week without giving the refrigerator any thought, and can find all but extremely perishable foods in satisfactory condition upon their return. Wilted celery or lettuce is rejuvenated and made crisp by a few hours in the refrigerator. Special desserts formerly requiring much preparation are easily prepared with its help, and many dishes can be prepared and

DIRECTOR OF THE STAR'S SCHOOL

MRS. RUTH CAMPBELL.

BORN in Michigan, Mrs Campbell spent the early years of her life in that state, going, at the age of 10, to Europe where she was educated for the following six years In the schools of France, Switzerland and Italy she took courses in domestic science and learned home management in countries where economy is of paramount importance

With continued interest in home economics she studied domestic science in the Detroit Seminary, later taking the National School course. In a family of 20 children, Mrs Campbell had ample opportunity to put her study to practical use. Her mother, who was one of the early pioneers of Michigan, believed in domestic training for her daughters, and turned over to each in succession the responsibility and management of the big establishment

* * *

UNDER such capable supervision Mrs. Campbell became versed in the practical demonstration of home economics in all its phases, particularly that of cooking, as her mother was state famed for her original recipes and in fact, it was through her prestige and influence that the first cook books of Michigan were published

Following her marriage Mrs Campbell's interest in home economics turned briefly to writing and lecturing, and after the publication of seven books and many short stories she began lecturing appearing before some of the largest clubs of the Middle West an experience which gave her an easy familiarity with audiences and the lecture platform.

* * *

BUT the war brought her back to home economics and she took a course in dietetics in Grand Rapids, putting it to practical use in various phases of war work This application of her studies was continued later in a tea room, which she opened for two cousins and which was a success from the beginning

Mrs Campbell's interest in interior decorating, combined with her study of home economics placed her in demand in all clubs in which she was a member for advice on table arrangements, as well as menus and considering her mother's enviable reputation and ability in such affairs, it is only natural that Mrs Campbell should have the same bent

Colorful Surroundings in Kitchen Take Drudgery from Housework

COLORINGS that add beauty and brightness and equipment that lightens the labor of engineering the household, are combined in the offerings of Marion merchants in outfitting the modern kitchen of today and the future.

Colorings, they will tell you are equally as important as the equipment, and their wares prove it. Walls, which not so long ago were just merely walls are transformed into harmonious color tones and also something that is easily kept clean and sanitary. New processes in all coverings provide this in any coloring and design from wood panel effects to floral patterns or plain tones Rounded corners at the baseboards route the bugbear of "cleansing corners" and floor coverings offer a wide and varied selection. Borders in harmonizing tones or contrasting effects decorate the floors and a boon to housewives is the new treatment of linoleum which "seals the pores" and prevents the accumulation of dust and lint.

Wide Color Range

Complete kitchen ensembles in half a dozen different stove process equipment for any size kitchen and are to be had in any color. Aside from these only unit of the cabinet may be used and the purchaser would buy piece by piece over the refrigerator and above the kitchen cabinet for dishes.

A far cry from the ordeals and woodbox days are the compact and enclosed stoves which are made with a thought of beauty and design and also with an eye for space conservation Cooking utensils may be stored away in the spacious drawers in the stove and when not in use the covered top may be pressed into service as a table. Insulated ovens keep the kitchen cool in summer and heat control does away with the worry of fate of scorched dinners These also are to be had in harmonizing color tones

Running a close favorite to the standard porcelain top and something new in table coverings is a linoleum top which comes in colors, dresses spot and doesn't mar with use Large tables are proving popular in that they provide ample space for the various electrical appliances and the space beneath them are easily utilized for storing these appliances and also for staple goods. Refrigerators, for the most part are white in color and fit into the color scheme effectively and harmoniously. Improvements in these conserve space inside and out.

Kitchen curtains are the last word in colorfulness and the ultra-smart ones are of glazed waterproof materials which shed dirt and grease.

... out in her kitchen equipment the housewife will find the country of especial interest. W... ing electric equipped with appliances to drain the tub and a dryer, which eliminates the use of a wringer have supplanted the washboard and tub and their more up-to-date successor, the plain washing machine, and the old-fashioned ironing board has been replaced with a complete ironer. And, adding beauty to this department are the most exacting clothes racks, ... comes to the ... space-saving "clothes horse."

SCHOOL NURSERY IS DISCONTINUED

Lack of adequate space and facilities has necessitated discontinuance of the nursery as a feature of The Star's cooking school.

The number of children in the nursery increased to such unanticipated proportions during the last few sessions of the school that it has been found impossible to operate it without overcrowding upon the auditorium space, which would relentless with precautions of the school program.

The management hopes that mothers who have been encouraged to enjoy the school nursery will be able to attend all of the school sessions as in the past.

New Lecturer Has Wide Experience

Mrs. Ruth Campbell To Conduct Classes Here for First Time; Comes to Marion Highly Recommended.

THE eighth annual Marion Star cooking school will open Tuesday, larger than ever before The school, given the women of Marion and vicinity by The Star, has ranked at the top among all the schools in the United States for which the Home Economics Service Corp. of New York City is responsible, and the program outlined for this year will maintain the school at the same high standard.

The cooking school is first, last and always of Marion, by Marion and for Marion, with Marion foods, appliances and equipment furnishing the material for the school

This year Mrs. Ruth Campbell will conduct the school. She comes to Marion with the highest of recommendations as a lecturer and demonstrator.

A system of amplifiers will be installed again this year so that every woman in the auditorium may hear the lecturer This feature, added last year, received high commendation from all sides

The doors of The Star auditorium will open at 1 p m, and those who arrive before the picture starts at 2 will be entertained with a program of music beginning at 1 30

The approximate attendance last year was 4 500 women for the four days With the improvement and additions that will be made this year, the attendance is expected to reach the 5 000 mark

Newest Equipment Used

All cooking will be done by gas, on the newest range that has been developed A complete line of the finest of new kitchen equipment will be displayed on the floor of the auditorium The proper shoes to wear to gain the most comfort while at work in the kitchen, the prettiest and most economical dresses for housework and the newest of the aluminum products, will be among the floor displays

This year, the girls who usher will wear the style of dress most approved by the lecturer, in order that those women in the rear of the auditorium may study more closely the points of style and practicability for which they were chosen by Mrs. Campbell

One popular feature of the preceding years' schools, that of permitting the women to go up on the stage after the lecture and see the results achieved by the lecturer, will be retained this year

All of the cooking utensils, appliances, equipment, clothing, everything in fact, that will be used in the cooking school, can be found in Marion's stores.

The cooperation of the Marion merchants with The Star makes possible the state of perfection that the school has reached in its seven years of existence

School Always Popular

The large audiences attracted to the school each afternoon, the smooth operation of the school and the excellence of the lecturer have added greatly to the popularity of The Star's school.

Arrangements between national advertisers and Marion merchants through the medium of The Star, have a great deal to do with the successfulness of Marion's cooking school.

The Home Economics Service Corp is universally successful in the cooking school promotion because of its ability to bring nationally and locally advertised products to its schools. Other organizations have attempted to promote similar schools but have failed because they attempted to advertise only one product and the women where such schools have been conducted, have gone away displeased

CHILDREN AT HOME GIVEN BALANCED DIET

Proper Ratio of Food Elements No More Cost To Serve, Matron Says.

Preparation of foods to promote development and growth without neglecting body building and regulating foods is the chief problem of those who plan three meals daily for 85 hungry youngsters at the Marion County Children's home.

Marion housewives who sometimes find it difficult to plan a meal that pleases the tastes of a family of three or four persons can sympathize with Mrs Elmer Barkley, matron, who, because of her experience as a graduate nurse with many years of nursing work, plans all menus and supervises the preparation of meals at the home.

Those who serve meals at the children's home have one distinct advantage over many housewives. At the home, there are no delicate appetites to humor, for the fresh air and exercise the children get build a demand for substantial foods There is no "picking" between meals to make the children say, "I don't like that," when healthful and nourishing foods are placed before them.

At three regular meal times each day the children get all foods necessary for their upbuilding. These include energy giving foods, starches, sugars and fats, proteins, minerals and roughage

Well balanced meals are no more costly than carelessly prepared ones would be, experience at the home has shown. Food for the 85 meals served there daily is bought in large quantities from wholesalers, and a large part of the fresh vegetables is raised at the home.

All meals are carefully planned. All children under six years get a quart of milk each day, and those more than six years of age receive a pint daily. Some fresh or canned fruit and two vegetables besides potatoes are served each day. Carrots, spinach, string beans and other foods rich in vitamins A, B, and C, are always included in the day's menu.

Sweets, the delight of children's appetites, are withheld to the last part of the meal.

Scouts' Training as Cooks Boon to Brides of Future

THE Marion salesgroom of the future who has been a Boy Scout in his youth, need not conjure his love with memories of the comebacks regarding the ability of the blushing young bride to cook. If he relishes home cooked cooking from youth and finds the domestic hours spent indoors instead of out of that bride in storing for the family larder of her bridge club, he only has to turn with the cook and in a few minutes a good meal will be in progress.

For the Scoutmaster who has made a Boy Scout will have done his work. Whether cooking was included in the requirements of the Boy Scout manual as a means of self defense, is not known, but the fact remains, they must know how to cook. Marion brides in the future may regulate their cooking of a meal according to the prospective husbands.

Before a tenderfoot can reach the stage of a second class Scout he must demonstrate his ability to build a fire in the open, cook a meal of at least one course of a pound of meat and two potatoes, to be selected by the cook of a

Recipe from Vienna, City of Fine Foods

VIENNA is so decidedly the home of fine cookery and rich foods, that if you enjoy a protracted stay there you are likely to come away with added pounds and a collection of recipes begged from restaurant chefs and charming hostesses. Viennese women no matter how aristocratic or wealthy take a tremendous interest in their kitchens, and if one dines even with a nobleman, she will give you the wished-for recipe herself without the assistance of her cook.

Nearly every Viennese household, either grand or humble has some pet recipe of its own entirely original and always delightful. It was from a charming and famous operetta star that was obtained the recipe of a most attractive dish served on a winter day after a sharp walk along the beautiful Ringstrasse.

Viennese meat balls are a most economical dish too unless you use an expensive cut and that is not necessary, for a cheaper cut will give the desired results. It's care and precision in cookery that counts quite as much if not more than the quality of the ingredients. A sense of balance, an instinct for just the right amount of seasoning these things make the cook. Here then, is the recipe for

Meat Balls, Viennese Style

1 lb of round steak
1 good sized onion
2 medium sized tomatoes
1 tsp flour or cornstarch
½ tbsp fat or butter
½ pint brown stock or water
Salt, pepper

Cut the onion fine, melt butter, add onion and let it get yellow but not brown. Cut up and add tomatoes then add the stock or water. Moisten flour or [illegible] to consistency of cream [illegible] when the mixture boils [illegible] stirring briskly and boil [illegible] but not too hard.

INVALID AIDED BY GOOD FOOD

Often Accomplishes More Than Medicine in Restoring Health.

In almost every home at one time or another arises the necessity to nurse an invalid back to health and to provide for that purpose foods carefully prepared and daintily served. Food pleasing to eye and palate and easily digestible often accomplishes more than medicine in bringing back the invalid to blooming health and without it physicians and nurses avail little.

Serve Punctually

In the case of any serious illness the doctor of course must indicate the kind and quantity of food to be given also the times for meals. Serve the food punctually at stated times. If nourishment is to be given every three hours for example don't stretch the interval to four hours. The patient is likely to be quite weak and if the wait is too long a wait may lose all desire to eat. Generally doctors want convalescents to have very early breakfasts, as strength is at lowest ebb in the early hours of morning. Repeat no dish even if a patient likes it unless so directed by the doctor for a weakened system can only use a certain amount of food and more is harmful. Vary the method of preparing and serving food so that a dish won't become tiresome. A change even in the china used helps appetite.

If the patient is inclined to nausea, ask the doctor if foods may be served iced or cold such as jellied bouillon or eggnog. Make the tray as attractive as possible and serve small portions only as much as a patient is likely to eat.

One of the most nourishing foods for invalids is arrowroot which is light and easily digested. Here is a splendid dish nourishing light and tasty.

Arrowroot Fluffle

1 or arrowroot
½ oz sugar
2 eggs
½ pint milk
Vanilla extract

Mix arrowroot smoothly with a very little cold milk. Boil remainder of milk with a very little flavoring and let it infuse ten or fifteen minutes then strain into the arrowroot stirring briskly meanwhile. Return mixture to stewpan and simmer gently ten minutes. Add sugar beat each egg yolk separately into the mixture and lastly stir in stiffly beaten whites. Pour into well-buttered baking dish and bake in a moderately hot oven from 20 to 30 minutes.

ENAMEL BRIGHTENED

To clean and restore white enamel furniture melt one tablespoonful of bicarbonate of soda in one quart of boiling water. When cool wash the furniture with the solution using an old flannel cloth.

LINEN CLEANSER

To remove medicine stains from linen make a paste of fullers earth and ammonia and apply to stains. Leave till dry, then wash the stained parts in cold water. Afterwards wash the articles in the ordinary way.

Recipes from South Make Delectable Oyster Dishes

NOW that oysters are coming into season again it's time to give some new and delightful oyster dishes. First of all here is a recipe for Oyster Gumbo one of the most delectable dishes served in New Orleans, where cooking is both a fine art and a science.

Oyster Gumbo is a grand cold weather dish and a standby in many a New Orleans family. First of all have a deep soup pot very hot. Put into it a large tablespoon of beef drippings and two tablespoons of flour. Stir constantly till brown. Then add one large onion 1 onion a good pinch of thyme and one good sized minced sweet pepper without its seeds. When these become quite brown add two tablespoons of canned tomatoes. Stir continually till the whole is well cooked adding a little tomato juice to keep from burning. Add one quart of juice drained from a quart of oysters. Add also one clove of minced garlic, one teaspoon of minced parsley salt to taste and a dash of cayenne pepper. Allow the soup to boil five minutes. Add the drained oysters letting them boil three minutes. Remove from flame and serve with hot boiled rice a tablespoon to each plate. Pour the soup over the rice.

Suits All Tastes

Here's an oyster stew that also is a grand dish sure to be enjoyed by the whole family. Take a quart of fresh oysters put them into a colander and set over a pan to drain. See to it that there are no shells with the oysters. Put a pint of milk and a pint and a quarter of water into a medium sized enameled or enamel saucepan. To this add five soda crackers crushed very fine one rather heaping teaspoon of salt and a dash of pepper. Now add the liquid drained from the oysters and set saucepan on stove. Stir occasionally and as soon as the milk boils up pour in the oysters which will cool the milk. The moment it boils up again take from flame and set it where it will keep hot without boiling.

In White Blankets

Add one tablespoon of butter and stir the mixture when melted. Let it stand about ten minutes before serving. This will materially add to the flavor. Have ready hot soup plates into each one of which a soda cracker has been broken. Ladle the stew over the crackers and serve.

And here's a recipe for oysters in white blankets. Make thin cakes out of soft finely mashed potato. Place an oyster on each cake if the oyster isn't large enough use more than one. Put over the oyster or oysters another cake of the same size. Pinch together the edges of the cakes lay in a hot pan well oiled with oil butter or sweet drippings and bake until the cake is a light brown.

TONGUES HELP SOLVE SANDWICH PROBLEM

Are Now Available at Low Prices and Can Be Tastefully Prepared

Smoked tongues are so very cheap just now that it will be well worth your time and attention to boil your own and have it on hand. Cold tongue is a grand stand by for supper or for sandwiches and is always relished.

There is frequent complaint about the waste percentage of boiled tongue for there is that huge top part with its chunks of meat gristle and bone but this need not be wasted for it can be utilized to make a really grand sandwich spread.

When cooking tongue always place it in cold water as is the proper method with all smoked meats then bring it to a boil and boil slowly very slowly. This cannot be too much emphasized.

Now assume that the tongue has been boiled and is pecked ready for cutting. We won't worry about that ungainly lump of apparently waste meat for we are going to use it all and thus make home boiled smoked tongue an even more economical dish than it is ordinarily.

Cut the top in pieces and put it through your food grinder. Add pepper and paprika but no salt as the meat will supply salt enough. Add a lump of butter to the seasoned chopped meat and proceed to work the whole into a smooth mixture. Pill it into jars or glasses cover with waxed paper and tie securely.

This paste will remain good for a long time, but once it has been tried you'll find that it won't get much chance to remain neglected in the icebox. It makes a most satisfying sandwich spread—satisfying to the taste, nourishing and certainly economical.

You'll be surprised to find how reasonably priced tongues now are. Choose a tongue that is rather dry for that means it has been better smoked and will taste better. The dry tongue will be darker in color too.

Serv-U-Wel AT THE Serv-U-Wel Cooking School

The fact that Mrs. Ruth Campbell is buying the foods used in the Cooking School at Serv-U-Wel Markets, is a tribute to Serv-U-Wel. She gives her unqualified indorsement to the Marion Serv-U-Wel Markets on the high quality and excellence of the food they sell, on their efficient and courteous service and on the genuine economy of trading at a Serv-U-Wel Market. Mrs. Ruth Campbell finds, as do all wise home economists, that price alone does not determine economy, but that quality is the determining factor.

RECIPES THAT AID HOSTESSES

Cheese and Egg Dishes Proven Valuable for Informal Entertaining.

There's lots of informal entertaining in the home nowadays and the good hostess is always anxious for easily prepared tasty dishes that will add charm to her simple but delectable meals. Cheese and egg dishes are always grand. Here's a quartet of perfectly new recipes that will do much to add to your reputation as a successful hostess.

The first recipe calls for three eggs beaten into an ounce of butter warmed so that it is pliable, but does not melt. Then add two ounces of grated American cheese, bake in small individual patty pans and serve hot in the pan.

A Delicious Dish

Swiss eggs is a bit more complicated, but is a most delicious dish. Rub butter over the bottom of a baking dish or plate and lay in the dish as many thin slices of cheese as you are eggs. Upon each slice of cheese place an egg which you have broken as though for poaching. Sprinkle the eggs with a seasoning of salt and pepper; then sprinkle with grated cheese and bake until the whites are set.

Scrambled eggs with cheese is a grand dish. The mixture for scrambling is made by allowing to each egg, one tablespoon of milk and an equal amount of grated cheese. Salt and pepper to taste. Beat the eggs, add the other ingredients and scramble quickly in a hot saucepan. Do not cook the mixture until hard and dry but take from the fire while still soft and serve in a hot dish. Grand for the hot dish of a buffet supper.

A Delectable Fondue

More elaborate and most delectable is a fondue made by mixing together seven ounces of cheese cut fine, two ounces of rolled crackers or bread crumbs, and two ounces of softened butter. Pour over this one pint of sweet milk, which has come to a boil and stir. Next add the yolks of three beaten eggs and a little salt.

Keep on until all is dissolved, then add the whites of the eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Stir in lightly with a silver fork. Grease a pudding dish, pour the mixture into this and bake twenty minutes. Use upper shelf as lower oven will melt the cheese. Serve hot as soon as done.

Ten Marion County Schools Teach Girls Fundamentals of Home Making

Ten Marion county schools offer courses in home economics. Two of these schools have vocational home economics departments which offer all phases of home making to the 20 school girl. These departments are at Prospect under the guidance of Miss Margaret McCall and at LaRue under Miss Agnes Epper.

The Pleasant Township school boasts the largest lunch room in the county schools and this year offering a 10 cent lunch that has proved so attractive that 150 boys and girls are served each noon. Mrs. Wilda Goedicke home economics instructor plans the lunch and oversees the luncheon.

The 10 cent lunch consists of cocoa, hot dish, a sandwich and dessert. Miss Cooper at LaRue specializes in a 15 cent lunch offering sandwich and milk or cocoa for five cents, a salad or dessert for five cents and a hot food for five cents.

Work on Home Projects

Home economics is taught in the seventh eighth and ninth grades and in the high schools where vocational home economics is taught.

Girls taking the vocational course carry on a supervised home project during the summer months giving them an opportunity to apply to home the principles they learned in school.

The vocational course includes foods and nutrition clothing house planning and furnishing household management child care and development family and social relationships home nursing and related arts.

The general home economics courses include foods and nutrition clothing and some industrial art work.

In some schools the foods work is carried out on a meal basis. The girls make out their own menus prepare their market lists and time schedules all of which are checked by the teacher before the girls go out to do their own marketing preparing and serving of the meal.

An example of one of these plans in operation, follows:

MENU

Baked meat loaf scalloped potatoes buttered carrots, bread and butter, head lettuce with French dressing, sliced peaches, cookies, beverage (coffee or milk).

Market list for four: Ground beef 1 pound, potatoes 1½ pounds, carrots 1 large bunch, bread 1 loaf, onion juice (if desired), mashed potatoes.

Staple supplies on hand such as sugar, flour, butter, vinegar etc., will take care of the balance of the meat.

Recipes

Meat Loaf—1 lb. beef ground, 2-3 slices bread, 1 egg, 1 tsp. salt, 1 c. cooked rice and few drops of lettuce, 1 head peaches, 1 quart milk, 1 quart.

If rice or potatoes are to be added, use smaller amount of bread. Wet bread in milk or water and press out excess moisture. Mix all ingredients. Shape into loaf and place in hot oven about 400 degrees Fahrenheit, for about ½ hour.

French Dressing

Three tbs. salad oil, 1 tbs. vinegar, ½ tsp. salt, few grains cayenne and paprika.

Mix salt and cayenne with oil and add enough paprika to color the dressing. Add vinegar and beat the dressing until well mixed, just before using it.

TABLE LINENS MAY BE EASILY TESTED

Water or Glycerine Provide Effective Means for Deciding Quality

Now that so many bargains are being offered in table linens it is well to reflect that not all bargains are good buys. This is especially true of linen for clever processes are used to make adulterations that deceive even an expert at first glance. Several methods have been devised to test the validity of the real linen label flaunted so often by cloths that are anything but pure linen.

If you apply some of the tests and your purchase does not react as it should take it back to the store immediately. Fine linen improves with use—becomes softer and more silky—while adulterated linen soon becomes limp and soggy, anything but a beautifier for your table.

One of the easiest ways to test for linen is to apply a drop of water to the material. If it is pure linen the water will spread then evaporat quickly. If it is mixed with cotton the water will act quite dif.

Another method is to apply a drop of glycerine to the material. If the glycerine is absorbed and forms a transparent spot your linen is all that it should be, but if instead of being absorbed it rolls up quickly like mercury, a quick trip to the store will be in order if your table is to boast a fine linen covering. For despite all sorts of fads fine linen—the kind with about 220 warp threads to the inch—will always be high style.

When buying table linen concentrate on double damask woven with two threads instead of but one so that the pattern stands out distinctly and see that the design is in a small all over pattern for the long overshot threads in large patterns are apt to be pulled or broken in ironing.

Fine linen deserves fine care and will repay you for it in lasting beauty.

TIGHT COVERING

When tying down jam pot covers dampen the string. The knot will not slip and when dry the string will shrink and tighten.

When washing dainty lingerie and hankies if a small piece of orris root is tied up in muslin and put into the water a delightful fragrance of violets will linger.

HELPFUL HINTS TO HOUSEWIVES

Mint will keep fresh for some time if it is washed in cold water in which a little bicarbonate of soda has been dissolved.

* * *

To revive patent leather, rub well with a rag soaked in olive oil and milk, then polish with a soft dry rag.

* * *

To remove jam or fruit stains from pudding-cloths put an egg shell into the water in which they are scalded.

* * *

To keep butter firm in hot weather fill a large basin with cold water put in as much kitchen salt as the water will dissolve then fold the butter in greaseproof paper and drop it in. Stand the basin in a cool place.

* * *

To dry and air silk stockings quickly, put some hot water into an aluminium hot water bottle. Roll them around the bottle. They will be smooth and dry in a very short time.

* * *

Starch if not used at once will be found to have jellied. To prevent this happening add a little cold water when the starch is at boiling point, and you will be able to use it at any time without further trouble.

* * *

Wallpaper that has become soiled by dust or smoke can be cleaned by rubbing it over with a flannel dipped in oatmeal.

* * *

Pencil marks on paint or wood work can be removed by rubbing them with a freshly cut lemon and afterwards with whiting and a soft cloth.

* * *

Powdered borax strewn on the floor at night will keep beetles away. It will also keep ants out of a larder.

* * *

When making steamed puddings if an egg is not available a good substitute is a tablespoonful of treacle mixed with milk.

* * *

An oiled rag wiped over the bright parts of the cooking stove will prevent stains from spitting kettles or saucepans.

If ceilings have become black over gas brackets, dry clean whitening rubbed on with a soft brush will generally remove the mark.

first class Scout he must prepare and cook satisfactorily, using camp cooking utensils, two articles including bacon and eggs, hunters stew, fish, fowl, game, pancakes, hotcakes, biscuit, hardtack, or a "twist" and give an exact statement of the cost of the materials and be able to explain his work to another Scout.

To obtain a merit badge in cooking the Scout must first demonstrate his ability to build a fireplace with stones, sod or logs, build a fire and cook camp stew, two vegetables, omlet and rice pudding. He must be able to mix dough and bake bread and to make tea, coffee and cocoa and to carve properly and serve correctly.

Mothers of Scouts passing through the cooking stages, are reluctant to grow enthusiastic as pans and other cooking utensils are found in unusual places or not found at all, but are hearty in their praise when the ordeal is over and the boys become a real help in the kitchen. When mother is delayed at her club she does not have to worry about Jimmie's lunch. Although the kitchen may bear the appearance of having been struck by a high wind, when she returns, she knows Jimmie will not go hungry.

ALWAYS BE READY TO RECEIVE GUESTS

Ease of Preparing Refreshments in Advance Solves Problem.

Hospitality and the home has never meant more than it does today. Once more we are serving nice little dinners and suppers, either set or buffet-fashion and spending ideal evenings playing bridge and reviving the almost-extinct art of conversation. No one today wants the type of rich meal that was once so popular. We are nearly all of us dieting and are grateful to the hostess who provides a buffet supper with salads so that we can take our choice and keep on the right side of the celery fence.

So much can be prepared in advance and placed in the refrigerator until it is ready. If you are going out and the men of the family decide to have friends in, you can earn their undying gratitude by preparing all sorts of cold snacks, salads, platters of cold meats, sliced bread stored where they will be kept nicely fresh and cool. Coffee can be prepared and placed in thermos jars. Before you go out set the table with plates, napkins, glasses and silver neatly arranged. Put the made sandwiches in waxed paper, arrange the various items on the trays of the refrigerator so that the men can slide out the trays and inspect the goodies for themselves. See to it that there are plenty of relishes, kidlets and such delectables as black and green olives, stripe of dill pickle and different kinds of salted nuts. A cold baked ham with cold cooked vegetables arranged in a delectable garnish will bring happiness to stalwart masculine appetites.

CUTS SKINS THIN

Buy a wire pot scourer and keep it for new potatoes, and you will find it will take the skin off thinly and much more quickly than scraping.

LEAGUE HITS JAP INVASION

Commission Disapproves Military Operations in Manchurian Report.

CHINESE ARE SATISFIED

Declares Government Under Pu-Yi Not Accorded Support of People.

By The Associated Press

GENEVA, Oct. 3—The League of Nations was definitely at grips today with the Manchurian problem—perhaps the greatest test it has faced in its history—following publication of the report of the Lytton investigation commission which intentionally condemned Japan's military occupation and turned thumbs down on the Japanese-advised regime of Henry Pu-Yi.

The commission, in an exhaustive analysis of the situation which began with the opening of the Japanese army's drive in September of last year, found that the military campaign was unjustified and that the new state of Manchukuo is not supported by the Manchurian people.

It proposed a special autonomous regime for the territory, with China retaining full sovereignty over the three provinces, and suggested a special Sino-Japanese conference to work out the basis of a permanent settlement, with the provision that the league council take a hand if the Chinese and Japanese themselves fail to agree.

All Sign Report

Because of the delay requested by Japan and granted last week, by the league, consideration of the report will not be taken up until Nov. 14. It was signed and approved by all five members of the commission, Lord Lytton of Great Britain, General Frank McCoy of the United States Count Luigi Aldrovandi Marescotti of Italy, Dr. Herman Schnee of Germany and General Henri Claudel of France.

Generally speaking, it was hailed in all quarters here today, except by the Japanese, with satisfaction. The more the Chinese studied it, the more they seemed to like it.

The report scouted Japan's contention, so often repeated while the military campaign was at its height last winter, that her soldiers were fighting in self-defense.

After giving the conflicting Chinese and Japanese versions of the events which provoked the outbreak of hostilities at Mukden on Sept. 18, 1931, the committee said "The military operations of Japanese troops . . . cannot be regarded as measures of legitimate self-defense.

The commissioners also condemned the bombing of Chinchow, by Japanese airplanes near the close of the campign. "Bombing of a civil administration by military forces cannot be justified," the report said.

Call All Bandits

"It has been the practice of the Japanese to describe indiscriminately as 'bandits' all forces now opposed to them," the report said. "There are, in fact, apart from bandits, two distinct categories of organized resistance, namely regulars and irregular Chinese troops."

The government of the new state of Manchukuo under Henry Pu-Yi was frankly characterized as one formed and supported artificially by Japanese military and civil officials, without genuine support from the local Manchurian population.

The commission did not hold China blameless for the situation in the east, however, and it sharply indicted the Chinese government for its weakness and for administrative disorders. It also insisted China must have regard for Japanese economic interests in Manchuria.

SERMON GIVEN BY COLLEGE DEAN

Speaker At Episcopal Church Harvest Home Service.

"Gratitude" was the theme of a sermon delivered by the Very Rev Charles E. Byrer, D. D., dean of Bexley hall, Kenyon college, Gambier, at the Harvest Home Thanksgiving service yesterday morning at St. Paul's Episcopal church.

The theme was applied to the time of depression. He suggested that a happy outlook from within would help to create the spirit of gratitude which is essential to life. He expressed the belief that the present condition of ingratitude is in keeping with the times and will clear away in time. A change of perspective and an emphasis of spiritual values and of things which are worthwhile are essential to a spirit of gratitude, he said.

commission, was delaying the decision by refusing to write an opinion. Bricker, however, agreed to remain on the commission so long "as other members agree to dispose of the Columbia case."

Governor White, commenting on the decision, said he had hoped the rate would be about 45 cents. Pointing out that the question was an academic one, he added that it should be somewhere between 48 and 55 cents.

Marion Rate Case Still Pending

The utilities commission's decision in the Columbus Gas & Fuel Co. rate fight, which has paralleled the rate fight of Marion and other municipalities against the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. in many ways, can not be taken as a reliable indication of the probable outcome of the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. fight. This is the opinion expressed this morning by several Marion men who have been closely connected with the rate fight of Marion and other cities and villages against the Ohio Fuel Gas Co.

Only in one way might the Columbus decision be taken as having a bearing on the local case, it was pointed out by C. F. Bronson, manager for the Ohio Fuel Gas Co. It might reflect, he said, a tendency on the part of a majority of the present commission to fix new gas rates somewhere near the average of rates in other principal cities of the state.

Both Congressman Grant E Mouser Jr., who represented the city for five years of the seven-year-old rate fight, and City Solicitor Carter M. Patton, who has represented the city in the fight in recent years, voiced the opinion that the Columbus decision would have no bearing, direct or indirect, on the Marion rate fight.

Valuations of the Ohio Fuel Gas Co property have been determined by the commission and approved by the state supreme court. It is now up to the commission to compute rates for this city on the basis of these approved valuations, they pointed out.

At present, a rate of 57 cents per thousand, based on the consumption of an average of 7,500 feet, is being collected here, part of it under bond, pending the outcome of the rate fight. The company has offered to settle the fight with the city for a rate of 69 cents a thousand on an average consumption of 7,500 feet, gas company officials said.

HOOVER PRAISED IN CONVENTION ADDRESS

Rep. Fish Lauds President at Opening of New York G. O. P. Meeting.

By The Associated Press

BUFFALO, N. Y., Oct 3—The keynote speech of Rep. Hamilton Fish Jr., as prepared for delivery at the Republican state convention today, called President Hoover "the greatest asset of our republic."

Attacking Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt, Fish said,

"In his swing around the country he has made numerous speeches, used multitudinous platitudes and glittering generalities and proposed nostrums ad nausea, like a quack doctor, for every conceivable ill, but has failed lamentably to present a constructive program for unemployment and farm relief, national economy and economic recovery, which are the paramount issues of the campaign."

The keynote speaker bespoke "whole-hearted support of the President for his courageous stand against the payment of $2,480,000,000 to able-bodied veterans in the present financial crisis."

"A situation may develop when congress convenes in December," he continued, "that would require the enactment of emergency legislation to afford monetary relief to the unemployed and needy veterans out of the balance of their adjusted service certificates to be paid in monthly installments for a period of not more than one year. This could probably be financed without endangering the public credit or creating further unemployment."

Discussing President Hoover's record, Representative Fish said "he has averted national ruin and disaster, he has checked the depression and is leading us back on the road to recovery."

RESURFACING STARTS ON EAST CENTER ST.

Improving of Principal Thoroughfare To Require Three Weeks.

Work of resurfacing East Center street from Baker street to Kensington Place was started by the state highway department this morning after a contract for amesite for the improvement had been awarded to the Marion Asphalt Products Co of this city by the state department Saturday.

The work is being done under the direction of C. C. Porterfield of Marion, superintendent of maintenance for the state highway department in the county. It is expected three weeks will be required to complete the resurfacing.

The resurfacing work was started at Baker street this morning. The brick section of the street from Baker street to Grand avenue will be given three applications of material. The first is for the purpose of filling the depressions and the second of larger stone will provide the base on which the top dressing will be applied.

From Grand avenue east but two applications will be made, that of the larger stone and the top dressing.

The city's portion of the work was completed last week when the last of five asphalt and the street car rails were removed from the street from Grand avenue east. The asphalt was used by the city in repairing and improving other streets in the city.

The amiesite for the improvement is being hauled from the plant of the Marion Asphalt Products Co., north of the city in highway trucks.

Giant Wesleyan Telescope To Aid in Research

By The Associated Press

DELAWARE, O., Oct. 3—From far-away Holland an astronomer will come here tomorrow to use the giant telescope at Perkins observatory for three months of research work.

He is Dr. Jan H. Oort, lecturer and observer at the University Leiden observatory.

Development of new methods of studying distant nebulae and the making of photometric observations of these bodies will occupy the scientist here.

Desiring to obtain data which can be had only through use of one of the world's largest telescopes, he selected the 69-inch Perkins reflecting telescope.

Dr Oort is known as a pioneer in the development of the theory of rotation of the world's galaxy. His views concerning the way in which the sun and stars form a huge spiral nebulae in rotation are shared generally by astronomers.

NOMINEE ENDS CAMPAIGN TRIP

Roosevelt "Thoroughly Satisfied" at Completion of Tour Through West.

PLANS TWO MORE JAUNTS

Will Cover South, Middle West and New England Before Election.

By The Associated Press

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 3—Governor Roosevelt returned to Albany at 9:07 a. m., today after a three-week campaign tour that took him to the Pacific coast.

The governor was met at the train by a small group of democrats to the Democratic state convention, which opens at noon.

After leaving his special train, Governor Roosevelt was driven to the executive mansion.

One of the first to greet the governor was Lieutenant Governor Herbert H. Lehman, who is favored by Mr. Roosevelt for the gubernatorial nomination. The governor was expected to take a prominent part in the party councils later in the day in advocating the nomination of Mr. Lehman.

Roosevelt ended his 8,900-mile campaign trip "thoroughly" satisfied, as he said, that his Democratic drive for the White House had gained strength in the scores of states he visited on the three weeks' trip.

At Detroit, crowds which filled the naval armory to its capacity of 5,000 and extended outside the building to a number estimated by police at 25,000, heard Mr. Roosevelt talk yesterday on what he termed "social justice, through social action." He labelled it a non-political address.

Governor and Mrs. Roosevelt were hosts last night at Detroit at a dinner to the newspaper writers, camera men and others of the party who traveled with the nominee on his three-weeks trip.

At the dinner he revealed that tentative plans had been prepared for a 10-day campaign trip through the south and middle west, and a final trip into New England a few days before the Nov. 8 election.

The southern trip is scheduled to open on Oct. 17.

BANDIT, FOUR POLICE SHOT IN GUN FIGHT

Mile-Long Running Battle Staged on Outskirts of Flint, Michigan.

By The Associated Press

FLINT, Mich., Oct. 3—A bandit was shot and wounded probably fatally, and four members of a posse were wounded by the accidental discharge of a shotgun today during a mile-long running gun fight on the outskirts of this city.

The bandit, unidentified, was shot as he sped in his automobile along the highway after returning the fire of state police who had been advised by radio of his approach. His car careened into a telephone pole and was demolished.

The four persons were wounded when James Smith, state police officer, picked up his shotgun from the pavement near the wrecked car. The gun discharged, wounding Patrolman Herbert Fitzgerald, 35; Joseph Gilbert, 20; Steve Vargo, 22, and Cyriel Hoornaert, 42. None, physicians said, was seriously injured.

The bandit was sought for a series of lunch stand and garage holdups on the highways between Pontiac and Flint.

A screwdriver with a blade set at 45 degrees to its handle has been invented for turning screws in corners impossible to reach with an ordinary tool.

"Know Your Vegetables" Is Secret of Health Diet

KNOW your vegetables as well as your onions, for therein is the secret of health Medical men tell us that our diet each day should include three vegetables and that if possible one of the three should be eaten raw There are three main classifications of vegetables and these are leafy vegetables, root vegetables and stem and fruit vegetables So try to include one of each type in your daily menus Your leafy vegetables which include of course, salads should include a cabbage if you are not going to have lettuce or water cress A savoy cabbage with its wrinkled outer leaves is delicious and keeps well Avoid cabbage that has a yellowy appearance and lettuce that has brown spots See to it that Brussels sprouts are bright green and free from insects Buy lettuce and cabbage by weight Heavy heads give good value

Root vegetables include of course beets, parsnips, turnips, carrots etc Raw carrots, chilled and grated on to slaw, water cress or lettuce will not only add to the appearance of the dish, but will add to its health content as well See to it that the root vegetables are ripe, firm and crisp Your family will soon acquire a taste for raw, tender young turnips treated the same way as carrots and used with salads

The other classifications include "fruit vegetables" such as beans egg-plant or tomato Corn and peas are seed vegetables and asparagus and celery are typical of the stem group Don't buy off-color vegetables even if they are sold very cheaply For they will not yield the health content and nothing you can do will disguise the flavor See to it that cauliflower and broccoli is not widely branched The broccoli should be dark green without a tinge of yellow in its purplish bloom

TOO MUCH WATER CAUSES POOR GRAVY

Dilution by Other Methods Results in Delicious Liquid.

A good gravy is indispensable with meat and poultry There is a tremendous difference between sauces and gravies, but we have encountered gravies which should be designated rather as a thin sauce And a thin sauce is hardly the thing to serve with a meat dish. Too much water is nearly always the reason for an unsuccessful gravy. The juice of the meat is the main ingredient of the gravy and we are going to tell you of a way of thinning the gravy without any water, a method that is as economical as it is delicious in results. Grand for stews, too.

Ask your butcher for several knuckle bones. If you are a regular customer the chances are that he will give them to you gratis. Ask him to chop them through in several places. Wash the bones and place them in a stewpan of water, not too full, so that no liquid will run over. Boil for several hours. Do not place any seasoning in the pan, nothing but the bones and the water. Your nose will tell you when the goodness is extracted from the bones. The water will be brown. On it will be the brown foam that housewives of yesteryear, who were not as scientific as we are today, used to skim off with a spoon and throw away, when cooking soups. Now we know that this brown foam contains most valuable vitamins.

When done, strain the liquid into a bowl and place in the refrigerator until you have a dish that calls for gravy. Add this liquid to the juice of the meat, in lieu of the customary water and the result will be a rich and delicious gravy that will enhance your ability and reputation as a cook, no matter how skilled you may be. When stewing meat, add the liquid instead of water and your family will demand stews and more stews and more gravy.

SHINE FOR IVORY

Ivory keys, or any ivory article that has become yellowed, can be made white by covering with a thick paste made of powdered whiting and a little pure alcohol Leave on 24 hours; the alcohol will then have evaporated and the whiting can be brushed off.

TO CLEAN CARPETS

To remove dirty marks from carpets make a stiff paste of fuller's earth and magnesia and hot water. Leave till dry; brush off briskly with a stiff brush. Try another application if not quite clean.

ADD TO BEAUTY

If you add a piece of lard the size of a walnut to the boiling water with which you make starch it will prevent the iron sticking and impart an excellent gloss to your linen.

SOLVES EGG PROBLEM

To prevent the whites of eggs from flying before being used add a pinch of cream of tartar when they are half beaten, and then continue beating.

The ability to control temperature inside the refrigerator has been valuable to many housewives. Safe temperatures for even the most perishable foods can be maintained, and the temperature inside the box is constant.

New Ideas To Save Time, Labor and Energy

MAKE SPINACH TASTEFUL DISH

It Can Be Done So That There Will Be Requests for Second Helping.

Now that spinach has been glorified by having a song written around it, let's help folks feel more kindly to this vegetable. Too long it has been the bane of many children, to whom especially it should be a blessing.

There is, to be honest about it, too often a good reason why spinach is the stepchild of the meat, greeted with snorts, sneers or whimpers. Yet spinach, without sacrificing any of its valuable properties, can be made so tasty that requests for second helpings will be quite the regular order of things.

A New Way of Cooking

It's heartbreaking to prepare spinach—a difficult, boresome process—only to have it refused or eaten under duress, so I am happy that I have discovered a grand, new, healthful way of cooking spinach.

Many cooks use only the leaf of spinach, but there is just as good nourishment in the stalk and in this recipe it should be used.

Wash your whole spinach until the bottom of the pan is entirely free from sand or grit. Don't give the little boy who has heard an onata defined as "a green spot with sand around it" a chance to counter with "I didn't know that spinach was an oasis."

Shake the washed spinach and put it in rather a large saucepan, cover it tight and place over a small flame and turn the spinach often until wilted down but not quite soft. There is a good reason for this.

Drain Off Liquid

Now drain off liquid and leave the spinach to cool, then put it through a mincer or chop it fine, season with salt and pepper, add a goodly lump of butter and put it back in the juice and cook over a small fire a few more minutes, until quite soft.

This method is not only healthful, saving all vitamins and minerals in the juice, but extremely economical. Because we mince it, we are able to utilize the stalks. One pound of good spinach prepared as indicated will serve two or three people—even people who like their spinach.

Spinach done in this way may be used for the principal dish of a luncheon by adding poached, fried or sliced hard-boiled eggs. Serving with fleurons or puff paste or croutons of fried bread adds variety.

You'll be surprised to discover how that brief second cooking, by blending in the flavors of the butter and seasoning, makes spinach a new delight for the palate.

ABSORBS DAMPNESS

If a cellar is damp, place tins containing common salt in each corner. The salt will absorb the damp, and when it becomes very wet can be dried on top of the oven and crushed again for further use.

Empty cotton reels nailed to the kitchen wall make useful rustless pegs on which to hang damp towels and dishcloths.

Famous Chef Reveals Plan of Making Soup or Stew from Cheap Meat Cuts

A FAMOUS chef once described very brilliantly the slow, simmering process required by a soup or stew. He said, "Never allow the water to laugh, let it smile, smile ever so slightly." If every one of us could be made to understand just what this cordon bleu meant, just what "smiling" really stood for, we would have even the cheapest, toughest cut of meat appearing before us so toothsome and tender that it would win the approval of the whole family. Instead of this, expensive cuts come to the table and have the consistency of a piece of well-tanned shoe-leather. Such meats have been prepared when the water was not smiling, but bubbling with loud laughter.

The Value of Slow Cooking

Kitchen economy is a virtue, a science and an art. At the basis of it is the ability to be able to make fine, appetizing, nourishing dishes out of inexpensive cuts. It can be done. All it needs is careful preparation and cooking, an intelligent appreciation and understanding of things. For instance, there is as much importance in knowing how to choose a good soup bone, as in knowing how to cook it. When cold weather comes, and if you have a soup kettle, it is a grand plan to purchase two bones for soup, one the knuckle, which is very inexpensive, the other a solid meat piece. The good soup bone ought to be about two-thirds meat, and one-third bone and fat. When the meat is cooked to the point, take it from the stove. Lift out the meaty soup bone with a skimmer on to a large platter, and cut away the nicest pieces of beef.

Very often, one can obtain two or three pounds of this meat, well seasoned and made tender by slow cooking. Return the bone to the soup kettle and allow to simmer until the bones drop apart. The meat which has been taken out can be utilized in any number of good ways. It makes a perfectly grand hash, and when well seasoned can be turned into the most toothsome croquettes.

With the aid of a cup of stock and a few parboiled vegetables, there may be prepared a most savory stew. In warm weather it may be inclosed in an aspic jelly. And so it may be seen that a cut, inexpensive as it is, may, with care, yield two or three meals of excellent variety for a large family.

Better Hamburger

Many cheap cuts of beef can be converted into excellent meats by pot-roasting. This is true of the lean but juicy cross-rib, or a solid piece from the lower part of round, or face of the rump. Two pounds of flank, which is inexpensive, makes a very savvy dish. The meat is rolled, sauted brown, highly seasoned and then braised slowly for two hours with just enough water to make a good gravy. The flank rolled makes a very good soup, lifting the meat out when cooked and serving with vegetables and horseradish sauce. The stock left may be utilized next day as a rice or julienne soup. The sirloin, always very inexpensive, is really the best bit of beef for a stew. Good pieces of the round, which accumulate in small, unsightly portions on every butcher's counter, cost very little, and added and abetted by the food chopper, can be converted into hamburger steak. And incidentally this is much better than market hamburger, for one sees and knows just what does go into the chopper. And it costs much less in the bargain.

House Chores Combined With Reducing Exercise

LIVES there the woman who does not want to get something for nothing? Well, here's a way to do reducing exercises while accomplishing the daily chores about the home. One visit to the reducing specialist or gymnasium class will show you how nearly the exercises approximate those that are done by the housewife. Of course, the gym exercises are scientifically worked out, but you can do the same. And here's the secret. When you work about the house, keep your knees stiff. If you do this every time you stoop down, you will eventually take pounds off your waistline and abdominal region. And even if it comes hard at first, you will soon discover that you can stoop down and pick something off the floor without bending your knees. And not the finest gym course could do more for you.

A New Exercise

Another method of keeping the figure trim and at the same time keeping the house immaculate, is to go after dirt directly, especially in such rooms as bathrooms, the compact kind with small tiled floors.

The next time you clean such a bathroom, don't use a long-handled mop or brush. Here's a better way. Open the window wide and get down on your hands and knees. Keep your abdomen muscles contracted and your backbone as straight as possible. Wash a small space at a time, using warm soapsuds, a stiff scrubbing brush and a stiff cloth that absorbs water. If your position is correct, you'll feel the pull and stretch of the muscles in your arms, shoulders, back and sides. Even your leg muscles will feel it and benefit.

Work for a Trim Figure

Rinse the brush in soapy water often and change the supply as soon as the water becomes soiled and the suds die down. After the floor is thoroughly scrubbed, wipe it with a cloth wrung out of clear water.

Dry the entire surface of the floor thoroughly, else it will catch the dust and become tracked. Then when you are all through, take a cooling shower, just as you would at a gym class. Put a good lotion on your hands. Glycerine, rose water and lemon juice makes one of the finest lotions possible. You will find that, with due care your hands won't suffer as a result of going after the dirt directly and your figure will be trim and lovely.

YESSIR, THEY'RE SOME PUMPKINS

Collecting Foreign Recipes Provides Interesting Hobby

BY ALICE LYNN BARRY

"I TRAVEL the world over without leaving my dining room," said one ingenuous little housewife to me. Some day she hopes to go to Europe and so on, the meantime she is effecting economies and adding to the culinary delights of her household by collecting foreign recipes that are economical, but nourishing and tasty. She has friends who have lived for many years in France and from them she has culled some grand dishes, not the dishes served in smart hotels, but those served by the thrifty French housewife in moderate circumstances. Recently she received a new recipe one that is a favorite in provincial France. I have eaten it myself, while staying at a farmhouse near Honfleur in Normandy and can vouch for its value and its nourishing qualities.

A Recipe from France

The recipe calls for
2 lbs neck of lamb
2 ozs butter
1 bouquet-garni (parsley, thyme, bay leaf)
Hot boiling water
6 rather small turnips
3 tablespoons flour
3 small cloves garlic
Salt, pepper

Choose the lean end of neck of the neck of a good bottle lamb. If very fat remove some of it. Peel and cut turnips into thick slices. Heat about half the butter in a stewpan, fry the meat quickly until the entire surface is lightly browned; meanwhile sprinkle with some flour in order to make it brown more quickly. When ready add the boiling water, bouquet-garni, garlic, and a little salt and pepper, cover with a close-fitting lid and cook very slowly for one hour. In the meantime, heat the remaining butter, fry the turnips brown, then drain and put them into the stewpan containing the meat.

How to Serve

Continue to cook slowly until meat and turnips are both tender, then pile the meat into the center of a hot dish and arrange the pieces of turnip around the base. Skim well to remove some of the fat, then strain the gravy over the meat and serve. This dish is economical at any time but is particularly relished on a brisk day. The amounts given here will suffice to make sufficient to serve four people.

Fruit Butter Is Favorite in Winter Preserve List

"Put up a few jars of fruit butter every so often. You will find it a treat next winter." So counsels grandmother, thriftily. She can't resist a bushel of fruit at a tempting price. Really it isn't very tiresome to do home preserving if one is even mildly ambitious. Putting up half a dozen or a dozen jars at a time every week or so requires no great effort, and after a satisfaction to see the generous accumulation of jars at the end of the summer!

Fruit butters are very easy to put up, and any pulpy fruit will do—peaches, pears, apples plums or tomatoes. A specially delightful butter is made of the small egg tomatoes, yellow or white.

Tomato Butter

6 pounds tomatoes
2 pounds apples.
2 pounds sugar.
1 teaspoon cinnamon

Scald tomatoes until tender peel and force through sieve. Add peeled, chopped apples and simmer until thick, then add sugar and cinnamon, simmer five minutes more and remove from fire. Pack in sterilized jars and seal.

Tomatoes usually have sufficient liquid to cook without burning but water is usually added to other pulpy fruit.

Peach Butter

10 pounds peaches.
4 pounds sugar.
4 quarts water.
1 teaspoon cinnamon
1 teaspoon cloves.
1 teaspoon allspice.
Juice 1 lemon.

Scald and peel peaches, remove pits and place pulp in a deep saucepan with water and let cook over a hot flame until pulp is well separated. Force through sieve or meat, then add other ingredients and simmer until thick, stirring frequently to prevent scorching. When quite thick, pack in sterilized jars and seal.

Small jars about the size of a tumbler mean a little extra work in preserving, but will be more satisfactory, as only a small quantity need be exposed at a time. Very large jars of fruit butters either result in waste, or inflicting on the family a sweet which, however good, grows monotonous if it appears daily for days on end.

BREAKFAST CLASSED AS IMPORTANT MEAL

Have Family Start Day Right with Substantial Nourishment.

If you can possibly do it, make your family eat a good breakfast, for it is the foundation of the day's activities, and as such, should not be skimped. Especially is this so when the day is warm. Cut down on any other meal if you are reducing or if you don't feel hungry, but please do the right thing by yourself when it comes to breakfast. And especially for those who are reducing, I would suggest a decent breakfast, for then there won't be a desire or tendency to eat so much at noon-day, nor will that old debbil, "three o'clock fatigue" be able to get in so much of its deadly work. Who hasn't eaten a light breakfast, a tiny lunch and then spoiled the whole thing by wolfing cakes and sandwiches and other forbidden fruit at about three in the afternoon. And so, eat a sensible breakfast and go light until dinner.

Stewed fruit with any dry cereal is grand for breakfast, as is cereal with a bowl of half-and-half. And if a banana is sliced and added to the cereal and liquid, the resulting dish will be one that is light, nourishing, tasty and withal, filling. With such a dish, you'll be able to attack the day's duties, however heavy, with strength and cheerfulness. Train your family to get up just a little earlier in the morning so that breakfast need not be taken on the run, with one eye on the clock. Such a procedure makes for "nerves" and many a nervous breakdown has its beginning in this and other habits.

Onion and chopped parsley if desired. Mix all ingredients thoroughly. Mould into shape and bake in a greased pan or roaster. Bake in a moderate oven (350 degrees F.) for 30-40 minutes. With salmon loaf serve a white sauce or tomato sauce if desired. For meat loaf serve tomato sauce if desired.

Cranberry Jelly

Three cups cranberries, 1 cup water, 1½ cups sugar.

Pick over and wash cranberries. Add water and cook until soft; then add sugar. Care must be taken that they do not boil over. Skim and cool. To make jelly, rub the cranberries through a sieve before cooking with the sugar. Cranberries may be served with all meats.

Peanut Brittle

Two cups sugar, ½ to 1 cup peanuts, ¼ teaspoon salt, (omit if salted peanuts are used).

Remove skins and finely chop peanuts. Sprinkle with salt. Put sugar in sauce pan and place over low fire. Stir constantly until melted into a syrup, taking care to stir from bottom and keeping sugar from sides. The sugar lumps at first but these will melt in time. Turn the chopped nuts into the syrup and immediately turn out on a buttered pan. When cold break into pieces.

Apricot Gelatin Mold

One tablespoon granulated gelatin, ¼ cup cold water, 1½ cup boiling water, ⅓ cup sugar, 1g of salt, ¼ cup lemon juice.

Mix the gelatin and cold water. Let stand until gelatin absorbs the water. Add the boiling water. Stir until all particles of gelatin have disappeared. Then add the sugar and salt. Stir until dissolved. Finally add the lemon juice, set aside to cool. Cook the apricots as any dried fruit. Cut them into small pieces and add the amount desired to the gelatin when partially cooled. Pour into molds to stiffen.

Twin Mountain Muffins

One-fourth cup butter, ¼ cup sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 cup flour, 1 egg, 1 cup milk, 3 teaspoons baking powder.

Cream the butter, add sugar and egg well beaten, sift baking powder with flour and add to first mixture, alternating with milk. Bake in well greased gem pans 25 minutes.

Uncooked Icing

One egg white, 1 cup confectioners sugar, ½ teaspoon vanilla, lemon or almond.

Beat the egg white stiff. Add the sugar until the mixture is stiff enough to spread. If this is not enough for the cake you are icing, 2 the cream and more sugar may be added. Add the desired flavoring and spread on the cake using a broad bladed knife. This icing may be colored with a vegetable coloring paste. The addition of 1 square of melted chocolate will make a chocolate icing in which case more sugar will be required.

Minute Mayonnaise

One whole egg, ¼ tsp salt, ½ tsp paprika, ½ tsp sugar, ½ tsp mustard, 2 cups oil, 2 tbs vinegar or lemon juice.

Combine egg, lemon juice or vinegar, seasoning and ¼ cup of oil and beat vigorously with a egg beater. It should thicken somewhat immediately. Add the rest of the oil, ¼ cup at a time, beating hard after adding each ¼ cup. This mayonnaise can be made in 5 to 7 minutes and is a time and labor saving method. The mayonnaise will be thick if everything is very cold.

Smothered Peas

Three cups cooked rice or hominy, 6 eggs, 3 cups medium white sauce, ½ lb grated cheese.

Put cereal into a buttered baking dish and make six depressions in the cereal layer. Open the eggs into a cup taking care not to break the yolks and pour one in each hole. Bake 10 to 15 min. just until eggs are firm. Make white sauce, stirring in cheese just before serving. Pour the sauce over eggs and cereal.

Rhubarb Marmalade

One qt. rhubarb, 1 qt. sugar.

Let stand 1 hour, then cook till clear. Grate two oranges and grate the rinds. Add and cook 5 minutes. Seal.

Coffee Cake

One cup sugar, 1 egg, 1 tsp butter, 1 cup sour milk, 1 tsp soda, 2½ cups flour.

Beat egg gradually, add sugar, then softened butter. Mix and sift flour and soda and add alternately with the milk. Pour in two shallow pans. On top of batter sprinkle 3T butter, 1 T flour, ½ cup sugar and cinnamon all mixed thoroughly together. Bake in moderate oven about 10 mins.

Sailor Hat Pudding

One egg, ½ cup brown sugar, 2½ cup flour, ½ cup molasses, 1 melted butter, 1 T soda dissolved in ½ cup warm water and added last.

Mix in order given above. Steam 1 hr. Serve with yellow sauce: yolk of 2 eggs, 1 cup sugar, ½ pt whipped cream.

BUSINESS TRAINING HELPS YOUNG BRIDE

Gets Results from Running Household on Efficiency Basis

"I REALLY believe that my business training has been as helpful as a course in a domestic science class," said the young bride. "I knew that I could not be expected to cook perfectly at once, for cooking is a question of experience. But I knew that it would make everything easier if I determined to run my home with the same efficiency and care that is given to an office, and that plan has helped me tremendously.

"This is perhaps the answer to a question often propounded by young men the question as to the respective merits of a home girl and a business girl. Frequently it is the latter who makes the finest housekeeper. Not only is she more efficient but she finds in her little home the response to all the longing for it that she had to suppress during her business years.

"This particular little bride was most efficient. She consulted with an experienced home maker and prepared a list of all the kitchen essentials both kitchen equipment and stock for the food shelves. These are always kept up to date, stocks never allowed to get low. Every month she takes an inventory and anything missing is immediately replaced.

"The wise housewife is always prepared for emergencies as our new bride stocked her shelves with every variety of canned goods and sent for the recipe books put out by various manufacturers to learn how their products might be used to best advantage. She purchased a file index and every recipe she wants to keep is neatly typed on a card and catalogued. In time, she will have a wealth of household lore that will be invaluable.

"Housework is arranged on a strict schedule in her home and nothing is allowed to interfere with it just as office work must proceed without any interruption. And most important of all a budget has been drawn up and is being strictly adhered to."

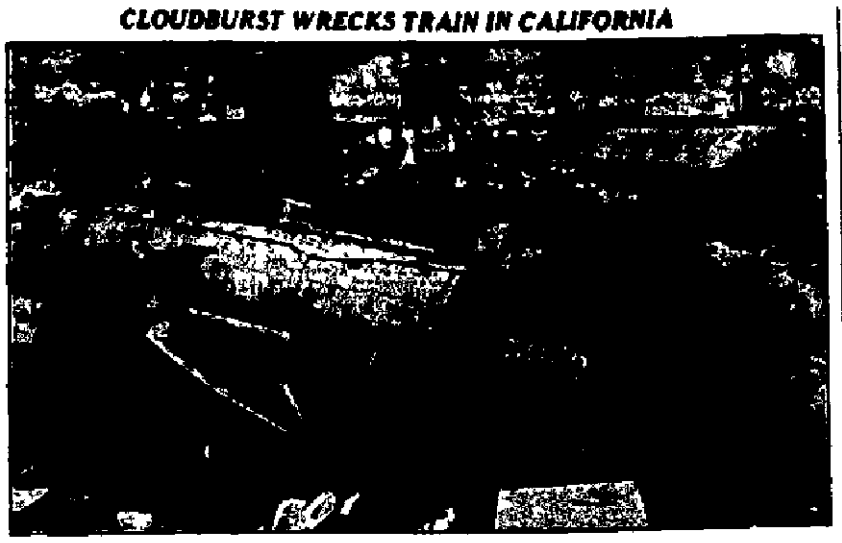
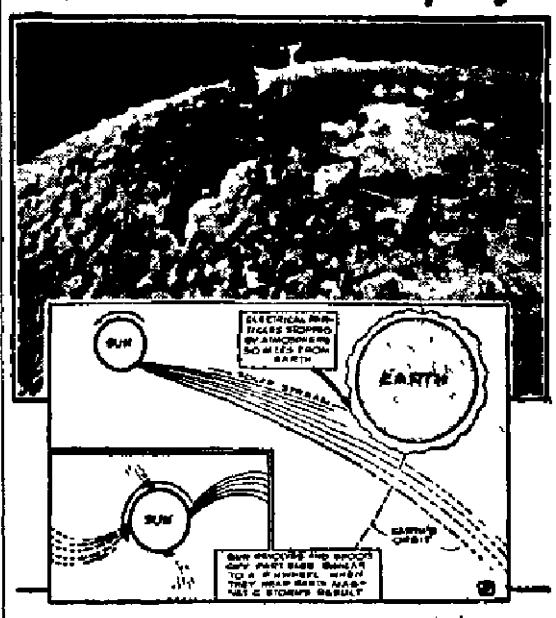
CLOUDBURST WRECKS TRAIN IN CALIFORNIA



Many lives were lost when a locomotive and several freight cars were swept into a creek bed when they were struck by a cloudburst in the Tehachapi mountains near Bakersfield, Calif. The engine, tender and one freight car are shown in the creek bed. (Associated Press Photo.)

Radio, Compass Trouble Traced to Sun's "Spray"



Electric particles spouting from the surface of the sun as shown in diagram below, cause radio, telegraph and compass trouble on earth. A new method for measuring the activity that causes this spouting may bring improvements in electrical communications. Photograph above shows how surface of the sun looks.

BY F. B. COLTON
(Associated Press Science Writer)

WASHINGTON—Streams of electric particles, shot out from the sun like water from a spinning lawn sprinkler, are pictured as the cause of electrical disturbances on earth in a report of the Carnegie Institution of Washington.

A new way to measure the activity on the sun that sends out these streams described by Dr. Julius Bartels may aid in overcoming these disturbances and pave the way to future advances in radio and wire communication.

Dr. Bartels has found the force of the streams varies through 27-day periods, the time of the sun's rotation, and changes in the force can be measured by changes in the earth's magnetism.

Earth "Soaked" in Minute

When the earth runs into one of the streams of particles, it is soaked in less than a minute. That is why so-called magnetic storms, unlike ordinary storms often begin simultaneously all over the world.

Magnetic storms are disturbance of the earth's magnetism and electricity caused by the streams of particles and have no connection with thunder storms or other storms due to "weather." They sometimes interfere with telephone and telegraph communication so much that it is impossible to send messages, and also disrupt radio transmission.

The streams take about a day and a half to reach the earth from the sun. They originate at certain definite points on the sun's surface, but not necessarily in sunspots, as formerly believed, says Dr. Bartels.

Atmosphere Stops Particles

The streams may be electrons ions (mutilated atoms) or molecules. They do not actually reach the earth, but are stopped by the atmosphere before they approach within 50 miles of the surface. Effect of the particles on the magnetic field that surrounds the earth is the actual cause of the magnetic storms.

No one ever has seen or measured these streams from the sun, but scientists have detected their existence indirectly.

One method of detection is observation of the auroras borealis or northern lights, which is a glow resulting from collision of the streams with gases in the upper atmospheres. Another is noting of changes in the earth's magnetism resulting from currents generated by the collision.

COUNTY FAIR HERE FINISHES IN CLEAR

Officials Report 1925 Exposition as Financially Successful.

The 1925 Marion county fair was a financial success, fair officials announced today as they progressed in the preparation of a financial report, covering the exposition to be read at the annual meeting of the Marion County Agricultural Society Nov 26.

The report probably will not be completed until a few days before the annual meeting and will be made public at that time.

Fifty per cent of the premiums have been paid, and the board has guaranteed payment of the remaining 50 per cent by next March 1. Most of the bills incurred during the fair have been paid.

Nominations for fair board members will be made Nov 10, C. G. Ritzler, secretary said. Six members will be replaced this year. The board is composed of one member from each township, three from the city of Marion.

Society To Meet.

The Woman's Missionary society of the First Reformed church will meet Wednesday night at the parsonage on South Prospect street. Mrs. Robert W. Rucks, wife of the pastor, will be hostess.

HELPFUL HINTS TO SIMPLIFY HOUSEWORK

Kitchen Efficiency Is Helped by Wise Selection and Care of Its Equipment

CHECK up on your kitchen. If the household is to be run as a business concern, which it really is, surely the kitchen, which is the heart of the home, must function perfectly.

Do you go over your cooking utensils from time to time, eliminating those that are not in perfect working order? You should, or you will find, some day when there is important cooking to be done, that you are minus a necessary utensil.

See to it that the kitchen contains utensils suitable for various types of cooking and various temperatures. Stock some cast-iron vessels, and have some heat-proof glass for roasting. Inspect your aluminum pots and pans. If any are discolored, cook tomatoes, rhubarb, lemons or other acid fruit in them. You will find that makes it'em as bright as when purchased.

Inspect Enamel Ware

Inspect carefully any enamel ware you may have and throw out anything that is even very slightly chipped. If you get any new enamel ware, place it in a larger pan of cold water, bring it to a boil, and after boiling will let it cool while still in the water. You will find that the utensil will not chip, for this process certainly does toughen enamel.

See to it that the household cutlery is in perfect shape, and wherever you can, eliminate cheap grades of steel. Knives of low grade steel soon become blunt and useless. Have a carving knife of high-tempered steel And a small vegetable knife with a thin blade of fine steel, so that it will cut small parings. It's an economy. Use the cheaper knives you have replaced to do the rougher work of the kitchen, such as turning food on a griddle or frying pan, and save the finer ones.

See to it that usable corkscrews and can openers are on hand so that there is no need to use a good knife to open bottles or cans.

Wire baskets are essential for frying and as food strainers. Pastry, bread and meat boards should be in perfect condition, and there must be a supply of wooden spoons for mixing and stirring. Wooden forks, too, are useful.

Making a Cabinet.

Dish mops should be clean. Replace as soon as old or worn. If you haven't a food chopper, invest in one. It has unlimited uses as you will soon discover, when making risottos from left-overs. Get a palette knife or spatula—grand for turning foods in frying pan or on griddle, and two strokes with its thin, flexible blade will clean a mixing bowl.

Stock up with dish and glass towels, and keep a supply of paper towels. You'll find many uses for them.

Organize your kitchen. If you haven't a kitchen cabinet, create a unit that can be used as such. Put an old kitchen table in a convenient corner and group shelves on the walls around it. Saucepans can hang from its sides or from the shelves. Many an old book case has been pressed into kitchen cabinet service with excellent results.

Mix ingredients and pour into greased loaf pan. Let stand 10 minutes. Bake 50 minutes in slow oven.

Art of Cake Baking Calls for Careful Use of Best Ingredients

TO say "I baked this cake myself," may be either self-praise or self-condemnation. There is something truly delightful about serving one's friends at a tea party with at least one dish not purchased, but made with blending of skill and affection for those who are to partake of it. It is a delicate compliment to any guest to feel that her hostess has gone to so much bother.

One of the nicest home-made dishes is a cake, for nearly everyone has a sneaking regard for a slice of really fine home-made cake. To make good cake is an art, but if a few hints are carefully followed, there's no reason why even the veriest amateur among cooks should not be able to point with pride to a handsome cake as the product of her own kitchen handiwork.

See to it that your oven is at the heat indicated in the recipe. If you haven't a thermometer, use a piece of white paper. Place this in the oven, and if at the end of five minutes it has turned yellow, the heat is right for a large cake, where a moderate, steady heat is best.

Please don't keep opening the oven door. The cake should be in for about seven to eight minutes before you open it at all. If you are then apprehensive that the top of the cake is browning prematurely, fold a piece of paper in four, sprinkle it with cold water and cover the cake top with this.

Use only the best ingredients, and be careful about exact quantities. Have the tins prepared before you start mixing. Use pastry flour. Don't beat the mixture after the flour has been added. The eggs should be beaten first, sugar added and the two whisked together, or the butter and sugar beaten together with a wooden spoon until resembling cream, then added to the eggs.

USE EYE AND NOSE IN SELECTING FISH

There Are Ways of Telling Exactly the Degree of Freshness.

"How shall I know just when a fish is perfectly fresh?" wails the little bride who is almost lost in the intricacies of marketing. "Your eye and your nose, will help," we reply and we counsel her when she next goes to the seashore to go down to the wharf when the fishing boats come in. We tell her to study the gleaming cargo and so learn the earmarks of fresh fish. We tell her not to be afraid to touch the fish, to handle them and she'll soon see the difference between a freshly caught fish and one that has lain in cold storage.

Freshly caught fish have eyes that are full and clear, the gills are red, the fins are stiff, the scales shining and the flesh is so firm that it springs back into place after one has dented it.

About the best rule for fish, is not to purchase fish which is out of season. It has lain in storage, and possibly has lost its flavor. Buy as near as possible to the amount that you need for the meal plan. Although nice things can be made from left-overs, it is better to utilize the whole fish at the meal, except of course salmon. And remember that two pound of halibut steak will be more economical, even if it is dearer, than five pounds of cod with its skin, head, tail and bone.

NEW WENDEL HEIR

A prominent social registerite and descendant of an aristocratic Virginia family, Miss Caroline Wellborn Dew (above), of New York, is the latest claimant to reach out in an attempt to pluck a $50,000,000 plum from the Wendel genealogical tree. Miss Dew bases her claim to the millions of the late Ella Wendel on her direct descent from Thomas Dew, of Fairfax, Va., who was also one of Ella Wendel's forbears.

FLOATING CULINARY ACADEMY

If your wife comes back from that European vacation this year and amazes you with her culinary skill, you'll know that she hasn't spent all her time during the ocean crossing gazing soulfully at the tossing waters of the Atlantic. The newest innovation on some of the palatial liners is a school of cookery, wherein mildly is instructed in the mystery of concocting those tasty French dishes. Here is a group of lady passengers of the S. S. France receiving a lesson in the kitchen of the liner from the chief chef.

44,000 Meals Served in Year at Army "Hotel"

Wholesome, well-balanced and hearty menus make up the bill-of-fare offered each day at the wayfarers' hotel at 469 West Center street, the emergency lunchroom and lodginghouse sponsored by the Salvation Army. More than 44,000 meals have been served since the lunchroom was opened the latter part of last October for the feeding of unemployed transient and single local men.

Care is taken that the men receive the proper food at each of the three meals and the menus are varied as much as possible each day. Cleanliness is the keynote of the whole establishment and provision has been made for cheerfulness and comfort. The kitchen has the appearance of one in a hotel and the long tables and benches in the dining room are neat and inviting.

The day begins at 6:30 a. m. for the chef and his assistant and meals are served from 7:30 to 9 a. m., 11:30 a. m. to 1 p. m. and 4:40 to 6 p. m. The work is carried on exclusive of any financial assistance from the Community Fund. The hotel as a whole is the first of its kind to be established in the city.

"Not one hungry man to leave the table," is the slogan of Captain John Hunter of the Salvation Army, under whose direction the hotel is operated. The first helping of food is sufficient, for Captain Hunter rules that it shall be generous. The guests are permitted all the bread they want and a second cut of coffee if desired.

The food is of good grade and while it may lack the luxury of deserts, it is always filling and nourishing. An occasional gift of pies from some of the local bakeries makes the day a red letter one.

Breakfast consists of oatmeal, bread and coffee. Dinner menus are as varied as possible including meats, potatoes, beans or some other vegetable, bread puddings, choice of sweet milk or buttermilk. Supper includes tomatoes or some other seasonable vegetable, cold meat or a substitute, coffee and bread. Other dishes used on various days include hash, spaghetti, cabbage, fish, cornbread, mush, soups and as many vegetables as can be had.

A garden at the rear of the hotel during the summer provided the kitchen with many vegetables.

EGG STAINS REMOVED

Egg stains on washable fabrics can be removed by soaping the garment in cold water for a short time before washing with soap and hot water in the usual way.

RHUBARB COMBINATION

Add a few dates to stewed rhubarb. They eliminate the "harshness" and only half the normal quantity of sugar is required.

STAIN REMOVER

A teaspoonful of ammonia added to a bowl of warm water removes fruit stains from the fingers.

Tarts, pies and buns will not burn if the bottom of the baking tin is dredged well flour before putting the dough in.

Linoleum may be effectively brightened if polished with a weak solution of kerosene and turpentine.

Add salt to water. When boiling, add potatoes and boil quickly 5 minutes. Drain, sprinkle with pepper and add to meat during the last 30 minutes of cooking. Turn potatoes to allow even browning.

To prevent sausages bursting dip them in boiling water before frying.

HOMECOMING BEAUTY

Fresh from triumphs abroad, Miss Lucille Page, well-known American stage star, is shown as she arrived in New York after a prolonged absence. For the past five months Miss Page has been appearing in the capitals of Europe. After a rest she will start to fulfill her American engagements.

CHEAP TABLE MATS

Do not throw away odd pieces of new lino, as these can be cut to form attractive table mats to prevent hot dishes marking polished tables.

Ivory-handled knives and forks which are badly stained may be cleaned by means of a cut lemon dipped in salt.

When washing glass or silver add a pinch of borax to the water. It will make them glitter, and all stains and marks will be removed.

Ohio Farmers To Profit from Hog Market Change

By International News Service
COLUMBUS, O, Oct. 3—Ohio's thousands of hog-raisers have been made the profit takers in a national market situation in which farmers of most other sections of the country will lose money, according to officials at the state department of agriculture

Rising hog prices are expected nationally and Ohio is the only leading state in the country that had a gain production of pork during the past year

While the West and Middlewest were suffering slumps in corn production last year, Ohio was harvesting a bumper crop with the result that feeding of swine continued in Ohio this year at the same standard as before

Figures recently compiled by experts show that Ohio has had a 7 per cent increase in pigs raised this year while the United States as a whole had a decrease of 7 per cent. By careful marketing therefore Ohio can throw its surplus into the gap and take advantage of anticipated price boosts

Although this favorable outcome is seen as the principal agricultural development of recent months the department also is able to report that fruit growers have found much more active buying of apples and peaches than a year ago

Ohio fruit growers who have quality products on hand are thus placed in a favorable financial condition

As a whole, the fruit crop for the year slumped due to the drouth The apple crop, according to federal figures, is to be about 4 851,000 bushels or two-thirds average

Hessian fly infestation has arisen to cause more trouble for drouth area farmers who are already harassed by poor seedbeds caused by lack of moisture, as they go about preparing their wheat ground

In the vicinity of Bucyrus Galion, Mansfield, Wooster and Akron the ground has been prepared without the difficulty experienced in other places

Due to the drouth the corn crop in the state is down this year, probably 20 per cent or more below last year, with the total yield seen as about 115 000 000 bushels

Wheat, however, is expected to be 15 per cent or more above average, according to federal estimates

OHIO PAROLE BOARD PUTS SAFETY FIRST

Refuses To Follow Other States in Freeing Convicts To Cut Expenses.

By International News Service
COLUMBUS, O, Oct. 3—Ohio refuses to follow the lead of several hard-up states which are turning loose short term prisoners in great numbers to reduce expenditures at penitentiaries and reformatories, it was announced here by Chairman L S Dougan of the state parole board

The question of whether a man is fit to be a member of society is still the one important point raised by Ohio when deciding whether a prisoner is to be given his freedom, according to Dougan.

Governor O K Allen of Louisiana recently signed reprieves for 125 white man and 200 Negroes to cut expenses at the state penitentiary at Baton Rouge.

Following an almost opposite policy the Ohio parole board, during the period of unemployment, has been reluctant to grant releases in many cases unless the prisoner finds a job

Thus, the depression that gets men out of jail in Louisiana, keeps them in cells in Ohio

Despite this, however, Ohio in the past year has freed about 3,000 more prisoners than usual, at a savings of $675 000 due to the new set-up provided in the new state parole act provided by the eighty-ninth general assembly.

"Oh, I wouldn't be frightened."

"He'd never stay away like this—would he?"

"Well—he might. Bout we'll do some telephoning and see if we can't get him. If he went into Croyston, he'd go to the hotel."

Jervis had not been in the hotel, nor in any of the other places that they tried. They rang up the Tetterleys, and Rosamund answered.

"Did you want Janet? She's away. She and Basher went off last night to put in a couple of days with his sister. Jervis? No, he hasn't been here. Has he gone off? Well, he does, you know—he always has. I expect he's forgotten he's married. I shouldn't ask too many questions if I were you—he won't like it." She laughed.

Nan's voice came small, and steady, and clear.

"You haven't seen him?"

"Not since yesterday."

Nan hung up the receiver. She turned a composed, colorless face on Ferdinand.

"What are we to do?"

"What did she say?"

"The Tetterleys are away. She says they went away last night. She says she hasn't seen him. She says he goes off—suddenly—like this. Is that true?"

F. F. ran his hands through his ginger hair.

"Well—he's sudden. Jervis has always been extraordinarily sudden. It's his temperament. If he gets an idea, he doesn't want to wait and turn it over in his mind—he wants to get going and do something about it quick."

"Without letting any one know?"

Ferdinand rumpled his hair again.

"Well, he might give a telegram to some one to send, and they might forget it. That's a thing that's very liable to happen. But I was thinking I'd run down into Croyston and make some inquiries."

Jervis had not been seen in Croyston. He had not been seen at the railway station. There was an early train to town at 7:45. They tracked down the two porters who had been on duty. Neither of them knew Mr. Weare by sight—but the train had been quite crowded as there was a day excursion.

The agent, a long melancholy man with a thin neck and an embarrassingly mobile Adam's apple, proved to be the type of witness who responds instantly to any suggestion. Asked if he had noticed a tall gentleman with black hair, he fingered his Adam's apple and looked vaguely over Nan's head.

"Tall gentleman? Black hair?"

"Yes," said Nan. "Did you see him?"

"Well, I might have."

"But did you?"

"Very tall gentleman?"

"Six feet," said Ferdinand firmly.

The agent's eyes came down an inch of two. From his manner it appeared that if they had wanted a gentleman of six-foot-three or upwards, he could have obliged them—but six . . . He shook his head mournfully.

"Well, I can't say as I noticed anyone of that description."

"You'd be likely to notice Mr. Weare—he's noticeable. Quick walk—strong build—very black hair—holds his head up and looks as if he'd bought the earth."

"Well, I couldn't rightly say I'd know him."

"Was there anyone on the train who might have been Mr. Weare?"

"Well, there might have been." The man brightened slightly.

"Was there?" said Nan.

The agent seemed to think so. He stopped fingering his Adam's apple and scratched his head in a melancholy, ruminative manner.

They had to leave it at that.

When they were driving back from Croyston, Nan said in a suffocated little voice,

"I dreamed—last night—that he was—dead."

"Well, that means he's alive," said Ferdinand. "Dreams go by contraries." But he didn't look at her.

"Stop the car!" said Nan rather breathlessly.

Ferdinand pulled up at the side of the road. They were out of sight and hearing of the sea, in a lane with a straggling hedge on either side. The sky over them was veiled with something between haze and fog. The hedges were powdered thick with dust. The light was pitiless—glare without sun.

"I think there's going to be a storm," said Ferdinand.

Nan took no notice.

"I dreamed—last night—that he was dead." She looked straight in front of her, and neither face nor voice had any expression. "It was—a dreadful dream. There was a dark place—and I saw him—he was lying on wet stones—it was quite dark."

"How could you see him if it was dark?" said Ferdinand. Nan was affecting him very uncomfortably. He made his voice as brisk as possible.

"I don't know—you can in dreams. I saw him. He was lying on the wet stones—and his eyes were shut. I woke up screaming, and he came in."

"What time was it?"

"I don't know. I looked at my watch afterwards—it was a quarter to 2."

"He was up at 2—perhaps he went out then. What clothes are missing?"

They hurried back to the house.

Alfred rummaged about for a long while. He found trousers, a blazer, a blue serge suit, dinner clothes, socks, shirts and trunks were missing. Most important of all, Jervis' razor and tooth brush were not in the bath. Hair brushes he had left behind; dressing gown too. But a dozen new handkerchiefs were gone—Alfred remembered them particularly.

"Why should he have taken all those handkerchiefs and left behind his hair brushes?" Nan asked in a low tone.

To Be Continued.

"Heart of a Wife"

BY ADELE GARRISON

Caught by Harry Underwood in a Flying Tackle, the Traitor of the Reeves Party on the Mountain Proves to be Ronald.

As the sound of the two bodies crashing together, and then into the underbrush, came to our ears, Hugh Grantland stood poised for an instant ready to rush to Harry Underwood's aid. Then he relaxed and, stooping, whispered to me the reassurance that he knew I needed.

"It's all right," he said. "Harry was to signal me if he needed me, but he evidently made a flying tackle and brought his man down; and once on top, old Harry needs no help from anybody. But what the—"

He did not finish the startled query engendered by the sound of a choking voice, evidently belonging to the victim of Harry Underwood's flying tackle.

"Oh! Mr. Underwood!" that choked voice said, and Harry Underwood's muttered answer, "Ronald! By all that's holy!" told us that Ronald Brixton, whom he had supposed to be at the hotel with his mother and Lillian, was the person who had been stalking us.

A Clearing in the Pines

"Don't move!" Hugh threw the command softly over his shoulder as he strode down the path in the direction Harry had gone.

When he returned, he and Harry were half leading, half carrying Ronald between them, and Harry, in low but agitated tones, was alternately berating Ronald for thus risking his life in following us, and apologizing for the rough usage he had given the boy.

"You could easily have cracked your dome in that fall I gave you, boy," he was saying as they came up to us. "I've a one-track mind, anyway, and there was only one thing on it when I went down that path—the bird that was coming up it had to be brought down. But whatever brings you—Look here! Nothing's happened at the hotel, has there, to Lil, or to your mother?"

He did not raise his voice, but it was suddenly raucous, uneven, and I realized how great was the fear for Lillian that had suddenly gripped him.

"No, no," Ronald said hurriedly. "But I—"

"Sorry," Hugh said inexorably, "but we'll have to wait to hear your reasons until we reach the place where the others are waiting for us. How about it? Can you stand?"

"Of course." Ronald's low voice was valiant if a bit unsteady. "I'm all right. But I tell you—"

"Then come along," Hugh retorted briskly, and Harry Underwood slipped a supporting hand under the arm of the boy who just had swung himself free in an attempt to prove that he had suffered no injury from Mr. Underwood's mistaken attack upon him.

"Don't be asinine," Harry said. "It's no disgrace to be groggy after a flying tackle from me. I'll just steady you a bit until you get your bearings again."

Ronald submitted dutifully, and our little procession got under way again. This time we did not stop until we came to a small cleared place, so surrounded by pine trees and carpeted by pine needles that it was like a cozy room. Until we were directly upon it, there was no indication that there was anything so delightful so close to us. The trail had wound through heavy underbrush, and then, unexpectedly, Harry had turned aside into a narrower path. After a few feet of this he had stopped, pulled aside a cluster of vines and ushered us into a sheltered little glade.

Two figures were already standing there near the entrance, and when we had filed in one of them sprang forward.

"Mary!" he said hoarsely.

"Nobody else, Neal," Mary said with a brave attempt at lightness. But there was a distinct quaver in her voice, and I knew just what was her joyous relief at finding her fiance safe.

No Place for a Woman

There was no relief in Neal's voice, however.

"Why did you come?" he asked in an agonized whisper. "You don't know what may happen in the next few minutes. It's no place for a woman."

"I agree with you," Philip Verlinden said unexpectedly. "Neither you nor Mrs. Graham should remain here for a single instant, Grantland, can't we spare somebody to take them back down the mountain?"

The Stars Say—

For Tuesday, Oct. 4

A DAY of much activity and probably turmoil is the augury based on the intervening planetary forces. The faculties and forces will be pitched to high tension, with sharp initiative and the necessary boldness to cope with some underhand currents of treachery and subtlety. Safeguard the finances, shun litigation and make changes with proper precaution. Benefits through employment and writings are forecast.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year of unusual initiative, with the energies under splendid stimulus and boldness. This may be required to root out subtlety and duplicity, intrigue and losses of money and prestige. Funds should not be squandered, make changes carefully, avoid danger of litigation. Employment, correspondence and publishings are under favorable influence. A child born on this day should be energetic, brave and resourceful, with success in employment and writings, although its affairs may be subject to sinister influences.

Notable nativity: Rutherford B. Hayes, President U. S.

Canada predicted gold worth $36,-897,000 last year as compared with a production of $45,453,001 in 1930. Ontario mines accounting for more than 70 per cent of the total.

WOMEN BUY

They are actually the major spenders of the country's money. Their likes and their dislikes must be considered in every merchandising problem. . .even in the designing of men's shirts.

And while women are notoriously bargain hunters, quality and style are after all their major consideration. And they like to think about a thing before they buy it. That's why they so assiduously read the ads as a prelude to a shopping tour.

But Behind The Woman Is The Family

and her buying is fundamentally based on her desire to fill their needs and to meet their desires. Her buying of foods and the hundred and one other daily necessities is based on her knowledge of her family's wants. And when it comes to purchases which involve a major investment there is a family conference. The woman buys. . .but behind the woman is the family.

Marion merchants offer the whole family service and quality. Nowhere else can you find a more complete variety of merchandise at such reasonable prices.

The October Stretch.

Democrats win national elections in September and Republicans win them back in October, runs the uncertain philosophy of campaigning. If it be true, Republicans will have to admit that the opposition made the most of its opportunities. Voters are still open to persuasion however, as October's bright blue weather and lower temperatures make a lively setting for the finish of the presidential sweepstakes.

Mr. Roosevelt has been running a winning race up to this point. The ubiquitous and sometimes injudicious straw vote has been giving the confidence that comes from knowing he has plenty of friends in the stands. Republican partisans, aware of the heavy handicap their candidate is running under, are waiting to see what Mr. Hoover can flash in the home stretch. It is no exaggeration to say that he has a distinct advantage as he enters it; Mr. Roosevelt is ahead, but he has been setting the pace. If Mr. Hoover has been running under wraps, as he has appeared to be doing, a whirlwind finish might cut off a badly winded Democratic gentleman at the tape.

Conditions peculiar to campaigning in a depression year have placed most of those who are not eager to see Mr. Roosevelt a winner in an awkward position. They have not needed any great accumulation of evidence to convince them that he is a small man aspiring to hold a big position. Until the machinations of politicians placed him under protection of the party's colors, Democrats, themselves, were his harshest critics. It is not hard to recall that Republicans, at the time, considered his nomination a stroke of good fortune for their cause. Mr. Roosevelt started his campaign as a weak candidate.

But now there is the curious spectacle of a weak candidate running ahead in the race. It is not so puzzling as it is embarrassing. Obviously, Mr. Hoover is having his real struggle, not with Mr. Roosevelt, but with the rider on his back—a heavy, disagreeable fellow who has grown up during four years of depression administration. Unfortunately, he is a fixture. Unless Mr. Hoover can make a superhuman effort and win despite him, a Democratic president will move into the White House next March.

From a humanitarian standpoint there is, of course, nothing fair about the situation. But certainly there is very little that is sensible in Republicans trying to cheer up Mr. Hoover by repeating endlessly the well known weaknesses of Mr. Roosevelt. There are many unfair things in politics, idealists say most of politics is unfair. Idealists, however, don't win races and they don't elect Presidents. It is going to take work to make a race of the presidential campaign. Perhaps running in second place at the beginning of the October stretch will be such a novel experience for Republicans that they will discover resources of endurance and ingenuity within themselves that they never dreamed existed before.

The Autopsy.

Like well organized people should do, the first instinctive act following the bursting of the prosperity bubble was to hold a hasty autopsy. The results, one suspects, will be more important tomorrow than they are today or were yesterday. The pleasure of solving the mystery has been postponed while readjustment to the havoc it caused has been the order of activity.

But there was a partial autopsy, and the facts it revealed lie snug in the back of many minds for use when the time comes. There is a natural temptation to get them out and dust them off occasionally, so to speak. This article is an attempt to catalogue them according to their importance.

Chief bogey uncovered by the early probers was overproduction of basic raw materials and agricultural products. The guess runs that this, by causing a fall in the prices of raw materials, began its insidious attack on the purchasing power of the agricultural population and parts of the working population years before the collapse.

While this was going on, devices and methods for increasing output and lowering unit costs were being developed rapidly. Once more the result was to undermine gradually purchasing power, while contributing to overproduction at the same time.

Ability to move surplus materials and products was being paralyzed progressively all the while by obstructions to international trade, reduced purchasing power abroad and a crazy economic arrangement held in place by the international debt structure. The United States, furthermore, wasn't the only nation with a surplus to dispose of. Attempts of other nations to move their goods were the direct cause of the very tariff barriers which, erected to protect domestic labor, had the later effect of closing markets on which the same labor was partially or wholly dependent.

Extension of credit, in order to sell people merchandise, under a force-feed system is another contributory cause to collapse, according to the doctors who examined the evidence. Consumers bought more than they could pay for; producers, watching their products disappear, fondly imagined that infinite expansion was possible and piled up a mass of goods which only recently has been diminished to a point where renewed production is necessary.

These things, however, were not apparent. The imperceptible decline in purchasing power at the bottom was more than hidden by the concentration of wealth in the hands of the investing public, which is more than ready to admit now that it went a little mad over the possibilities of making fortunes by the speculative method. The very fact that there was so much money in sight should have been a warning that distribution was getting lopsided, but it wasn't.

Three other facts are included in most collections. Preceding collapse there was a decline in building construction in the residential field. In the whole field there was the same overproduction characteristic of all branches of activity. Undoubtedly another contributory cause was economic dislocation, a vastly inclusive phrase covering the struggle between chain and independent stores, and exploiting the trophies of railroads, the coal industry, the lumber industry and many amusement enterprises. Last, and a subject in itself, is the rising cost of federal, state and local government.

These are the objects in the collection which helps to explain the depression. Clearly seen and explained in hindsight, they were and probably always will be invisible in foresight. Dusting them off and storing them away again for future rumination their custodians are painfully aware that they need other things like them will be the cause of many more collapses before the human race learns that greed, given enough rope, can not help but hang itself.

Poor Polly.

Many an American parrot grown complacent with years of good feeding and pleasant company is at a loss to understand what peculiar whim of the strange human race causes harmless birds to be viewed with suspicion and downright alarm every so often. Obviously, something is wrong. Offense has been given.

The perplexity of human beings in the presence of strange words and unusual combinations of letters even prevents the parrot from bearing the cause of its period unpopularity. 'Parrot fever' fails to convey the true import; "psittacosis" would do better, but teaching a parrot owner to say it presents problems almost as great as the owner encounters in trying to get Polly to show off before company.

The disease, of course, is not to be talked of lightly. It is at least as serious as typhoid fever and, in a civilization which has gained fairly good control of typhoid germs, almost as great a menace. Poor Polly, like the milkman of old, is an innocent assistant in contagion spreading, but an extremely effective one.

Perhaps it is just as well that information is available only to understanding minds. It may be hard on parrots to bear the brunt of unpopularity and panic every time a case of psittacosis is reported, but not nearly so hard as it would be to know that they were helpless shelters in offering a deadly menace to the lives of the strange animals who confine them in cages for the pure fun of it.

Ten Years of Thinking.

Appearance of the 10th anniversary number of "Foreign Affairs" is an excuse to point out man's failure to join forces to do better that which distinguishes them from animals—to think. There are possibilities which have not even been approached, as yet.

The first issue of "Foreign Affairs," when it was circulated 10 years ago, represented a road bed of expression for the trains of thought started by the Treaty of Versailles. Its publisher was the Council on Foreign Relations, whose roster was and is adorned with some of the brightest names in the familiar list of notables.

One who has traveled through the decade with the help of "Foreign Affairs" has at his finger tips the major impressions of the world's experience with post-war relations. He understands the whys of amicability, the wherefores of irritation. He knows sources; he is able, therefore, to guess at the outcomes.

What hint of direction does he catch in the tone of the excellent contributions to the anniversary number of this unique quarterly? What does all this excitement over conditions related to the post-war period portend? What is the unofficial verdict of collective thinking?

It is this: The course mapped out by the Treaty of Versailles has been followed to its end. The document, itself, is the same as always, but the things with which it deals have changed and are still changing. Formation of a new set of plans is imperative and imminent. That has been the verdict of all collective thinking: "Foreign Affairs" gives proof of its value by being in agreement. Too often the world does not know what it thinks until its conclusions are described by its professional thinkers.

Comment of the Press

TRAINING IN USEFULNESS.

"The purpose of the public school system is, perhaps, lost sight of—clouded in terms of dollars and cents and made to apply only to the economic advantages that result from education," says L. N. Taylor, of the Kentucky department of public instruction.

It is this educator's opinion, however, that the real purpose of public education is to train youth in usefulness, so that he will not only find happiness through usefulness, but that he will be the better able to serve his country and his fellow men.

Not all boys and girls take this viewpoint, however. Many look upon education as a necessary evil which they can not escape. They take their studies lightly and shirk their tasks. Many go to school and college for the social advantages. Social life of school or college is a splendid means of molding youth to the full usefulness but it is not the primary purpose of educational institutions.

Now and then misguided boys and girls revolt against the discipline which is necessary to the efficiency of the school. They are invariably wrong. The sober judgment of adult years is required to convince them of that fact.

No school can be conducted to the best advantage without discipline. In a lesser degree it is as essential to the pupil as it is to the soldier in the army.—Toledo Times.

Daily Guide to Health

BY DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND.

Sinusitis May Cause More Serious Ailments.

Most persons have heard a lot about "sinusitis." Either they have suffered from the disease or know of others who are chronic sufferers. Sinusitis, as the word implies, is an inflammation of the nasal sinuses.

The nasal sinuses are a group of air cells or spaces in the bones close to the nose. Each nostril has a set of sinuses which open into the nose.

There are four groups or pairs of sinuses. Each bears the name of the bone enclosing it. The frontal sinus is located in the frontal bone, behind the eyebrow and above the ridge of the nose. The maxillary sinus or antrum is located in the maxillary bone, which lies below the eye, under the cheek and above the teeth.

The ethmoidal sinuses are made up of several cells or cavities. They are arranged in a honeycomb fashion. Each of these sinuses is located between the nasal cavity and the eye socket.

Behind and at the top of the nose is a heavy bone which forms a part of the base of the skull. This is the sphenoid bone and in it is located the sphenoidal sinus.

The nasal sinuses are in reality continuations of the nasal cavities. They are lined with mucous membrane continuous with the lining of the nose.

Air is carried to the sinuses as it is taken in through the nose. The hollow spaces or sinuses make the bones of the face lighter and stronger. They have a part in protecting the tissues of the nose from sudden changes of temperature.

Unfortunately, the sinuses are a frequent source of infection. It is readily seen how a cold or infection involving the nose or its membranes quickly spreads to the sinuses. Common colds, influenza and grippe, as well as the acute fevers of childhood, are frequently complicated by sinus infection.

When the infection is persistent and pus accumulates, the health and welfare of the body are greatly impaired. Due to the impaired drainage of the sinuses, the pus can not escape, but becomes absorbed into the system.

This frequent source of body poisoning is the underlying cause of many serious and disturbing ailments. Arthritis, rheumatism, hay fever, asthma, heart disturbances, headaches, high blood pressure and nervousness are often traced to centers of infection in the sinuses.

Sinusitis should never be neglected. While recent years marked progress has been made in its treatment, Medical treatment is efficient in some cases, but in others operation is necessary. The operation is a simple one and need not cause alarm. It is essentially a drainage operation in which the sinus is explored and evacuated of all infection and pus.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3—Belated returns from Wisconsin indicate that "the hill" will lose after March 4 a one-man "wrecking crew", of minor and private legislation.

He is the bald, wiry and dark complexioned William H. Stafford of Milwaukee. Final figures in the recent primary show that he was nosed out for renomination in the house by a scant 224 votes. A progressive Republican by the name of Padway did the trick.

Stafford is known as "the" champion bill wrecker because of his careful scrutiny of all private legislation. Private legislation means the hundreds upon hundreds of bills dumped into the hopper by members of committees seeking pensions, claims, soldiers' relief and all that stream, and it is up to the other house to act.

In many cases these bills are introduced in error. Laws have been often without any hope of passage.

* * *

Both the Democrats and the Republicans have their own wrecking crews. It is their job to examine this mass of legislation before it comes before the house and separate the good from the bad.

Stafford, however, is a free lance wrecker. Before each private calendar day in the house he pores over the bills that are to come up for consideration. He carries big bundles of them home at night for study.

On private calendar day he gets red. Sitting well down toward the front of the house he seems to let nothing escape him. When he arises to discuss a particular bill he walks down the aisle toward the speaker's desk, looks up slowly, talking all the time. It wouldn't be far wrong to say that he has worn a path in the rug covering that center aisle.

Once he has made up his mind that a particular bill is without merit no amount of persuasion can change him. His oft-repeated "I object" speech is to kill the bill for the moment.—Ticks.

They may argue with him, plead and threaten but he usually remains adamant. Most of his colleagues long since have concluded that when Tall Stafford objects, that's all there is to it.

Stafford is a congressional veteran. He first was seated in the [illegible] which senators [illegible], has sat for 20 years as a member of the house. This is not the first time he has met defeat. Four times he has lost his seat.

Daily Talk to Parents

BY ALICE JUDSON PEALE

A CHILD'S NAUGHTINESS

Writing of his four-year-old daughter, Ruth, Rasmussen relates that one day, as she seemed on the verge of a tantrum and had begun to stamp her feet in rage, she hesitated for a moment. Then she stamped once more with one foot, quite gently and slowly, saying: "I think, I think one leg wants to be a little bit naughty."

The incident illustrates how young children tend to regard their own misbehavior. With Ruth the process probably was something like this. Feelings of anger rose up and demanded expression and almost simultaneously came the thought "It is naughty to stamp. But I am not naughty. It is only my leg that is naughty, not me."

The child refuses generally to accept that part of himself which gives him feelings of discomfort. He separates it from himself and refuses to admit his responsibility.

If those who are responsible for the child's training hold him up to excessively rigorous standards of goodness and obedience he is forced to deny so many of his real feelings that their suppression becomes an enormous task which envolves a large share of his emotional energy.

This energy is then not available for the learning and for the mastery of his environment which should rightly occupy his attention.

Gentle guidance occupy his attention.

Gentle guidance which spares the child the feeling that a part of him has conducted itself in a shocking, shameful and unforgivable manner is best calculated to give him time gradually to educate his feelings.

Temper tantrums for instance, do not call for rebuke and punishment except under special circumstances; they need only be consistently ignored to fail into disuse because the child sees that he achieves nothing through them.

OLD BUILDING CONTRACT.

Probably the oldest contract for construction work in existence in Franklin county is that for New England lodge, F. & A. M., at Worthington, near Columbus.

Avery Suttles was the contractor for the lodge building. Signatures were affixed to the contract June 5, 1820. Compensation was based on the brick used—$8 a thousand for the brickwork and $4 for every perch of stone used.

The structure thus built stands in good condition still. It is the oldest building in the state that has been in continuous use as a Masonic lodge home. The property now is owned by the lodge, but held in reverence and esteem by Ohio Masons generally, as the most ancient of the order in this state.

New England lodge was first chartered by the Grand lodge of Connecticut, from which state the Worthington settlers came, but as soon as a grand lodge was constituted in Ohio, that charter was surrendered and one obtained from the Ohio Grand lodge.

Europe Day by Day

BY O. O. McINTYRE.

Paris, Oct. 3.—Due to the six-hour advance over New York time, sleeping is difficult until Nature performs her adjusting. Consequently my wife and I have become steady breakfasters at the markets. Last night we thrilled to the liquid green beauty of a moonlit Bois.

We circled lakes, skirted and plunged through forests. After midnight lovers huddled the benches. The blue of the astonishingly low sky was scalloped in silver, glinting a velvety sheen on the mossy boles. The Seine, in shadow of stately cypresses, flowed smoothly, still. St. Cloud was a lacy twinkle of lights.

Now and then through a gap in some glade, walking on the dead leaves of centuries, was silhouetted a figure—perhaps a poet or an artist, dreaming. The Bit Dream. Castle-like al fresco restaurants—Pre Catelan, Armenonville—seemed in the blue haze sleeping tombs of aqua-marine. Silent, brooding.

The Bois is a symbol of love at full tide—a poem of ardour. No other spot is so definitely romantic. Even the air is especially sweet, moist, perfumed. We circled out as morning slashed the pink sky. Birds, insects, all Nature were in an asymptote—do I seem tense or anything?—of appreciative applause.

So back to Place Vendome through clean swept rues tucked behind big boulevards—phantoms of glassiness in the clear white gaslight. Concierges sit in door chairs until 9 p. m., then life dries up like ink on a blotter. From then on a single footfall becomes a hollow undersong, echoing vague terror.

* * *

The Citroen electrically lighted ad on Eiffel Tower split Paris into factions. The friable artistic considered it sacrilege, the stolidly practical considered it added revenue for the city. Anyway, we stopped to watch it in action last night. It changes 14 times—a giant rose bush, flashes of lightning, a constellation of stars, a sky high fountain rising and falling, etc., etc. Only once does it burst into a full length spelling out of Cointreau.

Parisian bars, brasseries, comptoirs and whatnots are deserted by 10 o'clock. Tables and chairs are piled high inside and cleaners give the ever gaudy glitter a next day polish. This is a day-drinking town. It begins with an 11 a. m. tipple and ends with after-dinner cordial or wine.

Deserted brokerage offices [illegible] spired by the early August rise [illegible] filling again. The market for New York stocks opens at 3 in the afternoon and closes at 8. It is a mixed crowd in the board rooms—Greeks talking to Chinese, Argentines, Swedes, Moroccans, Hindus and so on. In one I saw Jay Hobby, of Palm Beach and elsewhere, the eternally youthful Edna Wallace Hopper and, of all things, a blondined male Senegalese with a tooling old monocle, my word.

* * *

Swinging out of the Plaza Athenee this afternoon was a well-known stage dancer who has been wining and dining in Paris for six weeks. "I'm off," she cried "to Vichey to get deboloated."

* * *

I also ran across Col. Joseph Harfield, international lawyer, who had just flown from Copenhagen in seven and one half hours, skimming over seven different countries. We took a short drive around the city and I showed him rue Mouffiarde, a tortuously dingy and cut-throaty street—one of the oldest in Paris—back of the Pantheon. It is my one beau geste in Paris boulevardiering, the only street I know out of the usual routine. But I always intimate by just a sample of my amazing repertoire.

Four cocottes, with degage simplicity and raspberry nails, occupied the adjoining table along a Champs-Elysees terrasse this twilight. Smartly dressed, they expressed that provocative slant that somehow suggests simple surrender. A wheedling waiter, bowing toward them, urged a meeting. I had a notion to borrow a nearby car trumpet and join the ladies. If embarrassed I could query: "What say?" Odd, nymphs due pave retain a greater freshness than more meticulous-minded women of France.

Domestic felicity is that state of armed neutrality between husband and wife, which is regarded as "perfect happiness," until it breaks out into a little shooting party.

Thomas W. Lamont, partner in the firm of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., gave the principal address in the first general session of the American Bankers' association convention in New York and said that the question of German reparations had become secondary to the larger question of inter-allied indebtedness. He declared that some of the debt was uncollectable and that the task for America was to determine the amount that could be collected, charge it off, and "quit fooling ourselves."

Mayor George W. Neely, A. C. Edmondson and William G. Marshall left for New York City to attend the World Series games between the Yankees and Giants.

M. S. Bradley, town marshal of Mt. Victory, when questioned regarding the two lions reported roaming about in the neighborhood, declared: "I haven't seen the lions and don't believe any one else has. Reporters from Cleveland, Columbus and Toledo, some with guns and some with cameras, have been here and they are now conducting a search for the lions." He said most people in the vicinity thought it was all a joke.

W. H. Bolverstott, treasurer of the Marion County Agricultural society, reported that ticket sales at the county fair the preceding week had totalled 26,789, which was said to be the record high mark up to that time.

This was the first day of general registration of voters and the total for the day was 1,701. On the first day four years previous the total was 1,589.

A bridge party given by Mrs. Amos H. Kling at her home on East Center street was one of the first of early fall parties given Marion's social season.

AERIALS PAVE WAY FOR 3 TOUCHDOWNS

Guthrie Scores Twice as Presidents Romp Over Non-League Opponent.

BY BOB BYRD

Harding High gridders took to the air Saturday afternoon to roll up a 19 to 7 score over Delaware High at Lincoln field in Delaware.

Two of the three touchdowns scored by the Presidents were scored on Whitcum to Guthrie aerials, and virtually all of Harding's gains could be chalked up to passes.

Harding's aerial attack did not click so well in the early part of the game. Only one of more than half a dozen throws were completed in the first half. The most sensational overhead toss came as Whitcum passed 30 yards to Guthrie in the middle of the last quarter. Guthrie then carried the ball 18 yards for a touchdown that broke a tie score.

First downs were few, as both teams punted frequently and made their most substantial gains on long passes. Delaware collected seven first downs, Harding five.

Harding completed six forward passes, Delaware seven. Delaware threw 11 incompleted or intercepted passes, while Harding failed to complete nine. Yardage gains were close, Harding making 191 and Delaware 194.

FIRST QUARTER

Falix returned Rinehart's kick-off to Harding's 32. Whitcum picked up five through the line, Whitcum punted 44d Bray recovered a fumble on Delaware's 44. Whitcum's pass was intercepted. Mautz recovered a Delaware fumble on Delaware's 32. After an incomplete pass and several line plays which netted little yardage, Whitcum punted out of bounds on Delaware's 18. Delaware punted back to Guthrie on the 30 and Guthrie returned 18 yards, Harding failed to gain ground, and Whitcum punted the ball being returned to Delaware's 20. Stopped by the Harding line, Heinlen attempted a punt which Bray blocked and recovered for Harding on Delaware's 28. Harding failed to gain much yardage on three plays, and attempted to pass on the fourth down. Running back to pass, Whitcum was thrown for a 15-yard loss, giving Delaware the ball on their 17-yard line. Line plays failing, Delaware punted and Harding took the ball on its own 15. Whitcum punted to Delaware's 42. Zeigler carried the ball 14 yards for Delaware, and Heinlen completed a short pass for six more. The quarter ended with Delaware in possession of the ball on Harding's 34.

SECOND QUARTER

Heinlen's punt was blocked and Harding recovered the ball in mid-field. Harding failed to complete two passes. Whitcum punted to Delaware's 15. Zeigler carried the ball around right end for a 15-yard gain, Heinlen made eight yards off tackle. Thomas fumbled and Mautz recovered for Harding in midfield. Whitcum threw a 20-yard pass to Bray who carried it 18 yards before being downed. Whitcum picked up five yards off tackle, and Smith added two more. Whitcum's buck was stopped and he passed eight yards to Guthrie who raced across the goal line. Whitcum kicked an extra point, and the score was Harding, 7; Delaware, 0.

Gary, Delaware half, received Foltz's kick and returned it to Delaware's 38. Delaware failed to gain in three plays, and Heinlen punted to Harding's 35. Hare replaced Smith as Harding's quarterback. In a scramble for a fumbled ball, Delaware recovered. Heinlen attempted a pass for Delaware which Keller intercepted on Harding's 20-yard line and returned to the 36-yard line. Harding punted to Delaware's 18, and Delaware returned the kick, Guthrie taking the ball in midfield and returning it to the 32-yard line. Zook and Canterbury replaced Hinklin and Rathell as guards for Harding.

THIRD QUARTER

Smith returned Heinlin's kick to the Harding 29. Whitcum punted out of bounds on Harding's 30. Delaware's attack failed and Harding took the ball on its own 20. Whitcum punted to Delaware's 39-yard line. After a series of short gains, Gary completed a 25-yard pass to Wyss. Gary shot a short pass to Heinlen for a Delaware first down on Harding's 22. Delaware threw an incompleted pass over the goal line, giving Harding the ball. Whitcum's punt was blocked by Conrad and Delaware's pass went over the goal line and Harding again took the ball on the 20. Whitcum punted to mid-field. Thomas passed to Zeigler for 22 yards, followed by another eight-yard pass.

FOURTH QUARTER

Heinlen drove through the line for one yard. A lateral pass, Heinlen to Rose to Zeigler, scored for Delaware. Heinlen's kick was good and the score was tied. Whitcum returned Delaware's kick to his own 40. After two line plays and an incomplete pass, Whitcum punted out of bounds on Delaware's 21. Hagaman took the ball through left tackle for a 36-yard run, the only major gain Delaware made through the Harding line. Rose lost eight yards. With 22 yards to go for first down, Heinlen punted out of bounds on Harding's 34. Whitcum completed a pass to Keller for eight yards. Guthrie's and Whitcum's line plunges made it a first down. Whitcum passed to Foltz for a nine-yard gain, and then flipped a 20-yard pass to Guthrie who ran 28 yards for a touchdown. Whitcum's kick failed, and the score was Harding 19, Delaware 7. Delaware returned Harding's kick to the 40-yard line. Harding's line withstood Delaware's plunges, and Heinlen punted. Whitcum returned the kick, the ball being grounded on Delaware's 48. Guthrie intercepted Heinlen's pass and ran eight yards to Delaware's 48. Line plays failed and Whitcum punted to Delaware's 20. Harding blocked an attempted kick and recovered the ball on Delaware's 11. Whitcum passed to Keller for an eight-yard gain. Smith tore through center for a touchdown as the gun ended to end the game. Smith's kick failed, and the score was Harding 26, Delaware 7.

BROOKLYN LEADING PRO GRIDIRON CIRCUIT

Benny Friedman Sets Pace as Flatbush Team Wins, 14-0.

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK, Oct. 3—The Brooklyn Dodgers, led by Benny Friedman, may develop into an unexpectedly formidable factor in this year's race for the National professional football league championship.

The Dodgers, victorious over Stapleton in their first start, made it two in a row yesterday by trouncing the Boston Braves, 14-0, and gained undisputed possession of first place. Both Dodger touchdowns came on passes from Friedman to Jack Grossman, former star at Rutgers.

Green Bay, which had won its first game from the Chicago Cardinals and tied its second with the Chicago Bears moved into second place by handing the New York Giants their second straight defeat, 13-0.

Portsmouth's Spartans fell into third place in the standings when they gained no better than a 7-7 tie with the Cardinals. Portsmouth scored first, Cavoles taking the ball across after two passes had put it in scoring position. A low punt which smacked "Father" Lumpkin in the back and rebounded across the goal line where Tim Monnihan fell on it.

The Bears, for the second time in as many games, were held to a scoreless tie, this time by Stapleton.

THREE N. C. O. TEAMS TURN IN VICTORIES

Two Others, Including Unbeaten Mansfielders, Finish in Deadlock.

Two N. C. O. league football teams were held to the scores Saturday and three others racked up their games on the right side of the ledger. Harding downed Delaware, 19-7, Ashland walked all over New London, winning by a 27-0 score and Galion scored a 32-0 victory over Cristtime. None of these three teams were forced particularly hard by the non-league foes.

Mansfield and Shelby were able to get nothing better than tie scores out of Saturday's games. The Tygers were tied by Lima Central 0-0, thus putting another slight blemish on a winning streak now in its fourth season. The Mansfielders have been the several times since they commenced the streak four years ago but have never been beaten. Shelby was forced to the limit to gain a 13-13 deadlock with Willard.

Bucyrus, the ex-member of the circuit, was handed the third consecutive setback of the season, losing to Upper Sandusky, 19-12.

MILLERS BEATEN BY NEWARK, 5-2

By The Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS, Oct. 3—If it shall come to pass that Col. Jacob Ruppert feels help is needed for Messrs. Ruffing, Pennock, Pipgras, Allen et al, there's a burly hand ready for the call.

He is Don Brennan big right hander who yesterday put Ruppert's Newark farm club back in the running for the little world's series title.

For Brennan, it was victory No. 27 of the season.

Sunday's win, 5 to 2, before 9,509 persons, squared the series at two-all. Last week in the opener at Newark, he blanked the Millers, 11 to 0.

Babe Smacks World Series Pitching for .305 Average.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Oct. 3—Babe Ruth, participating in 10 world's series in a period of 17 years, has batted the pitching of National league champions for an all-time series average of .305.

The Babe did not begin to figure as a batting star in the baseball classic until he joined the Yankees back in 1921. While a member of the Boston Red Sox, he served only as a pinch hitter or as a pitcher. In his three world series classics as a member of the Red Sox he garnered only one hit, but he only participated in five games, going to the plate 11 times.

The one hit the Babe collected, however, in the 1918 series against the Cubs was a smashing three bagger, and was the beginning of his career as a batting champion.

Ruth's greatest year in the world series was in 1928 when he wound up with an average of .625.

NOVACK TO TACKLE REED HERE TONIGHT

Scissor Hold Artist Meets Oregon Flash in Shovel Gym Arena.

Mat fans here will get under another chance tonight to see their old favorite, Robin Reed, the Reed-sport, Oregon flash, in action in the main go of the regular Monday night toe twisting exhibition at the Shovel gym. Reed will take on Bobby Novack, the scissor hold artist, in a two-hour battle with two falls to win.

Neither of these mat gladiators need any introduction to Marion fans, both having become almost fixtures in wrestling here due to their many bouts in the Shovel gym arena. Reed has long been a favorite with the fans for his classy mat work but Novack has also been gaining popularity through his recent successes.

In the semi-final 45-minute bout tonight, Harry Miller, a clever welterweight from Pontiac, Mich., will take on Bud Carney of Chicago. These boys are reputed to be another pair of tough ones and their match looms as a good forerunner to the main battle.

The preliminary bouts will start at 8:30 p. m.

FIVE HURLERS FAIL TO STOP NEW YORK

Lazzeri Bangs Two Homers as Gotham Club Takes Fourth in Row.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Oct. 3—The world series of 1932 trailed off today toward its final resting place among baseball's legends leaving the realm of the national pastime once more under the absolute rule of the American league, and one of the greatest champions in all sports history—the New York Yankees.

Never before has any ball club approached the amazing record of the batting behemoths from Broadway, conquerors of the Chicago Cubs in four straight games, possessors of a streak of twelve successive world series triumphs.

It was something to set down in the record books. And worse still for the National league, there seems little prospect of the present situation taking any immediate turn for anything but the worse.

Relentlessly did the Yankees leap upon the punch soggy National league champions to shatter them yesterday for the fourth straight time 13 to 6 in the final match of a series that for lack of real competition has only been equalled in the past by the Yankee conquests of 1927 and 1928.

For one day the bats of Lou Gehrig and Babe Ruth lapsed into comparative silence, but there was no relief for the desperate Cubs. From now, and hitherto peaceful quarters, the firing broke out with sudden, terrific effect, and five pitchers, Guy Bush, Lon Warneke, Jakie May, Bud Tinning and even old Burleigh Grimes went down under a stunning 19-hit barrage.

There was but one last flare of hope for the vanquished, as the Cubs, hitting almost like the Yankees at the start, belted young Johnny Allen, freshman right hander, and disposed of him with a four-run assault in the opening inning that was climaxed by Frank Demaree's home run, with two on base. But it was a hope that quickly faded into disillusionment for the 50,000 militant faithful.

The Yanks slugged Bush from the peak in less than a round although they counted but once, bashed Warneke for a pair of runs in the third and drove him out of there in the fourth, when they nicked Jakie May for a couple in the sixth and piled full force onto the unfortunate southpaw for four runs in the seventh and the staggering Grimes for another four in the ninth.

Lazzeri Hits Two

The heaviest fire came from a gun that previously had sputtered as though the fuse were wet, Tony Lazzeri, and he belted two home runs in his anxiety to get his licks in before it was too late.

Gehrig and Ruth were held to three hits between them, but Joe Sewell, Earle Combs and Bill Dickey as well as Lazzeri came away from their last chance with three hits each.

The Cubs might have done better had they introduced earlier young Bud Tinning the only pitcher who troubled the Yanks during the series.

Once rid of Allen the Cubs bumped into old Wiley Moore, veteran of 1927 and 1928. The Missouri mule tamer held them in subjection, except for a brace of infield errors that allowed a run in the sixth until a pinch hitter brought Herb Pennock out to work the last three innings.

Pennock, never beaten in five full world series games, was as consistently effective as he always has been in a championship battle, though his ancient left arm no longer holds the speed and stamina it once knew. Herb allowed only a gift run in the ninth, when the Yanks refused to pay any attention to Bill Herman after the second baseman opened with a hit and let him run around unnoticed until he finally scored on an infield out.

A peculiar psychological factor, a superiority complex on one side, an inferiority complex on the other, prevaded the entire series, just as it did the Yankee conquests of 1927 and 1928, and in fact the entire World series period from 1927 through today. In the last six series, American league champions have won 23 games to 7 for the National league representatives, five of the six series, three of them in four straight games.

Only the Cardinals of last fall shook off the apparent instinctive submission of American league superiority, despite the fact that the Cubs this year hit briskly all along averaging almost five runs a game, they always looked the runner-up in a two-horse field.

BIG TEN TITLE RACE TO OPEN THIS WEEK; FOUR GAMES BILLED

Northwestern-Michigan Clash Tops Sked; Ohio State Host to Indiana.

By The Associated Press

CHICAGO, Oct. 3—The battle for the football championship of the Western conference will open Saturday with four league contests, the top engagement looming in Northwestern's invasion of Michigan.

While the Wildcats are meeting Michigan, Indiana will tackle Ohio State, Purdue will engage Minnesota, and Iowa will go to Madison to play Wisconsin. Illinois will play another warmup game, meeting Bradley and Amos Alonzo Stagg will take his forty-first University of Chicago team east to battle his alma mater, Yale.

Michigan, rated as an uncertain quantity before the season opened, today found itself right in the middle of the title contenders because of its startling 26 to 0 triumph over Michigan State, Saturday.

Northwestern had trouble getting started against Missouri Saturday, but once untracked, proceeded to wallop the Tigers, 27 to 0. The Wildcat line handled everything Frank Carideo's men tried and the Tigers could make no more than one first down.

Purdue trimmed Kansas State 20 to 13, while its Saturday opponent, Minnesota, had to work for a 12 to 0 decision over South Dakota state.

Ohio State proved that power is present by losing Ohio Wesleyan, 34 to 7, but Indiana, which must tackle the Buckeyes Saturday, had to fight like everything for a 7 to 6 victory over Ohio university.

Iowa looked somewhat better than expected in defeating Bradley, 31 to 7, and Wisconsin found Marquette just as unruly, as anticipated. The Badgers just managed to defeat the avalanche, 7 to 2, Illinois won both games of its doubleheader with Coe and Miami, defeating the former 13 to 0, and the Ohio club, 1 to 7.

Chicago had an open date.

Used like a pair of pliers, a new ammeter measures the electric current flowing through a wire by being clamped to the wire instead of cutting it.

There doesn't seem to be anything in the field of athletics that this young lady can't do. Know her? Sure, it's the one and only Babe Didrikson, of Dallas, Texas, who starred at the recent Olympics. Here she is demonstrating her ability at football when she took part in a gridiron exhibition at Southern Methodist University recently.

COMMUNITY FREE OF DIPHTHERIA 12 YEARS

Kelley's Island Classed One of Best Immunized Localities in Ohio.

By International News Service
KELLEY'S ISLAND, O., Oct. 3—For 12 years there has not been a case of diphtheria among the 700 children of this isolated spot in Lake Erie.

State health officials recognize the island as one of the most thoroughly immunized sections within Ohio's borders.

Dr. F. M. Houghtaling of Sandusky, health commissioner of Erie county, on a return to the island a few days ago, announced that all but two of the 700 children are now vaccinated against diphtheria, which formerly took many victims here.

Good excuses were given for the two children not immunized. One had a broken arm and its mother was afraid it would have two sore arms instead of one. The other was under the care of a physician who asked that immunization be deferred until the patient recovered.

Because of the isolated conditions of the island in the winter, when the lake freezes over and cuts the residents off from the rest of the world, Kelley's Island is known to be an ideal place for the spread of diphtheria carriers.

Due to precautions taken, however, Dr. Houghtaling declares that "I believe it would be impossible for a child of 16 or under living on the island, to have a case of diphtheria."

When immunization was started, mature men and women were the first treated. By following throughyear after year, it now is necessary only to immunize children of pre-school age, all others having been treated.

GRAIN VALUES IN EARLY SAG

Increase in Wheat Afloat Causes General Downturn at Chicago.

...By The Associated Press
CHICAGO Oct. 3—Grain prices tended downward early today, influenced by more than 4 000 000 bushels increase of the amount of wheat afloat for Europe Argentina was reported offering wheat cheaper abroad Opening unchanged to ½ lower, wheat afterward declined all around Corn started unchanged to a shade off and subsequently sagged further

Unofficial domestic monthly crop reports issued today proved bearish estimates of production of all grains being somewhat enlarged The average of private estimates put the 1932 yield of United States spring wheat at 264 000 000 bushels compared with the government September forecast of 263 000 000 Corn production was unofficially figured at 2 912 000 000 bushels against the government September forecast of 2 864 000 000

One authority said the merchantable quality of corn surpassed that of last year being 86.3 per cent compared with 85.9 per cent in 1931 and 81.0 the average year Another expert noted that the distribution of the corn crop was unusual a heavy output in the great producing state of Illinois Iowa and Nebraska and a decided shortage in the Atlantic states With the crop reports bearish wheat soon declined more than a cent a bushel Corn and oats were davereely affected by big receipts of corn here 777 cars.
